Report Tells Senate How To Cut Out Filibusters

Fight Over Cloture Foreshadowed by Library Bulletin On Rules Reform

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A coming struggle over the Senate's ineffectual cloture rule yesterday was foreshadowed by a Library of Congress bulletin on the pro and con arguments for Senate debate limitation.

The special study, prepared by George B. Galloway of the Library's Legislative Reference Service, suggests eleven possible "remedies for dilatory tactics in the Senate."

Topping the list, as a measure against filibusters, is the plan Republican Senators may have used had they retained control of the chamber—majority vote shut-off of endless debate.

The LRS analysis was requested alike by advocates and opponents of the filibustering device Southern Senators have used repeatedly to block civil right legislation. The requests were made in anticipation of the once bright but now faltering prospect of some decisive action next session.

Cloture Revision Pledged

The Senate Republicans at the close of the last session pledged revision of the Senate's archaic cloture rule after failing to break a filibuster against House-passed antipoll tax legislation.

A 10-man GOP committee was appointed to recommend revision of the rules and Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) promised to make these the first order of business when the next Senate convened.

The Republican plan was (1) to modify the rule requiring a two-thirds vote of the Senate before debate can be stopped and then (2) push a civil rights program through the gap.

Present indications are that the still Dixie-split Senate Democratic caucus will not go ahead with the GOP plan. Some individual Democratic leaders, like Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley, have declared for rules changes, but in general party steersmen shy at any early showdown.

The Legislative Reference Service study simply presents all the arguments for and against filibusters, without taking sides, gives a brief summary of filibusters and their effect on legislation, and presents a chronological history of efforts to limit Senate debate.

A List of "Remedies"

But it winds up with a list of proposed "remedies" suggested over the years. Like all LRS surveys the study is objective and designed alike for the information of those who will fight for and against the reform.

Galloway, the political scientist and Government specialist who prepared it, was staff director of the LaFollette-Monroney committee which pushed through the first major legislative reorganization in years.

Here are the 11 proposed "remedies" set forth by Galloway on Page 28 of the bulletin:

1. Amend Senate rules to provide for cloture by majority vote of the total Senate membership, or by a majority of those present, and make cloture apply to any motion, measure, or other matter pending.
2. Use of the previous question motion, as the House uses it, to shut off further debate by a majority vote of the chamber.
3. Require that debate and

Spokane, Nov. 12 (AP).—The 10-man crew of a B-29 bomber reported missing early today has been sighted beside the crashed plane on a Pacific island atoll, the Spokane air force base commander said tonight. A destroyer is steaming toward the island.

Site of the crash was reported to be Fias Atoll, approximately 130 miles east of Yap Island.

Africa Row Teaches Ike Folly Of Censoring Political News

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

VII

The minimum objective of the North African invasion was to seize the main ports between Casablanca and Algiers, denying their use to the Axis as bases for submarines, and from them to operate eastward toward the British desert forces. The successful action of the first few days assured attainment of the minimum object and we immediately turned all our attention to the greater mission assigned us of cooperating with General Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander's forces, then 1200 miles away at the opposite end of the Mediterranean. Between us we would destroy all Axis forces in northern Africa and reopen the sea for the use of Allied shipping.

The first move was made in mid-November while we were still in Algiers urging Darlan to order the French to cease fighting our troops and to cooperate with us. General Anderson's British First Army had been organized for the specific purpose of undertaking the campaign to the eastward, using Algiers as an initial base. He was directed to proceed with the operation as planned, and to exert every effort to capture Bizerte and Tunis with the least possible delay. However, he was beset with very great difficulties.

Began His Campaign Upon Reaching Shore

Under these conditions only a thoroughly loyal and bold commander would have undertaken without protest the operation that General Anderson was called upon to carry out. In response to my urgent orders he began the campaign on November 11 as soon as he put foot on shore.

When I transferred headquarters from Gibraltar to Algiers on November 23, I took advantage of the journey to begin inspections of our troops and facilities.

On arriving at Algiers that evening I found that previously issued orders to support Anderson's British army with whatever American contingents could be brought up to him from the Oran area were not clearly understood nor vigorously executed.

In the office when I arrived was Brig. Gen. Lunsford E. Oliver, commander of Combat Command B, a portion of the United States First Armored Division. He had made a reconnaissance to the front, had determined that railway communications were inadequate to get him to the battle area promptly, and was seeking permission to march a part of his command in half-tracks over the 700 miles between Oran and Souk-el-Arba.

The staff officer to whom he was appealing was well informed as to the characteristics of the half-track and refused permission on the ground that the march would consume half of the useful life of the vehicle!

Foe, Weather, Terrain Tough Combination

Courage, resourcefulness, and endurance, though daily displayed in overwhelming measure, could not completely overcome the combination of enemy, weather and terrain. In early December the enemy was strong enough in mechanized units to begin local but sharp counterattacks and we were forced back from our most forward positions in front of Tunis.

I was determined not to give up unless personally convinced that the attack was an impossibility. Weather prohibited flying and I started forward by automobile on December 22, encountering miserable road conditions from the moment we left Algiers.

The rain fell constantly. We went out personally to inspect the countryside over which the troops would have to advance, and while doing so I observed an incident which, as much as anything else, I think, convinced me of the hopelessness of an attack. About thirty feet off the road, in a field that appeared to be covered with winter wheat, a motorcycle had become stuck in the mud. Four soldiers were struggling to extricate it but in spite of their most strenuous efforts succeeded only in getting themselves mired into the sticky clay. They finally had to give up the attempt and left the motorcycle more deeply bogged down than when they started.

We went back to headquarters and I directed that the attack be indefinitely postponed. It was a bitter decision.

It Is Always Necessary To Avoid Defeatism

In such circumstances it is always necessary for the commander to avoid an attitude of defeatism; discouragement on the part of the high commander inevitably spreads rapidly throughout the command and always with unfortunate results. On that occasion it was exceedingly difficult to display any particular optimism.

Politics, economy, fighting—all were inextricably mixed up and confused one with the other.

On the political side Murphy and his British counterpart, Mr. Harold Macmillan, worked tirelessly, but they had had to deal with the dangerous Darlan, later with the gallant and honest but politically uninterested Giraud, the weak Yves Chatel, the notorious Nogues, and men of similar stripe.

We insisted upon liberalization of the political systems, but every

Chinese Boast Of Victory In Canal Fight

Advance on Suchow Is Believed Halted Despite Red Claims

Nanking, Nov. 12 (AP).—Progovernment newspapers proclaimed in extras today a "major victory" over nine Chinese Communist columns along the Grand Canal 160 miles northwest of Nanking.

(The Communist radio, heard in Peiping and San Francisco, made similar victory claims over government forces. The Communists said they were within six miles north of Suchow, last main base guarding Nanking.)

The officially sanctioned Nanking reports said national troops savagely attacked and hurled back Gen. Chen Yi's troops who were trying to cross the historic canal.

The reports said the Communists suffered 37,000 casualties and fled in disorder in a battle that began Wednesday night and lasted through Friday morning.

Drive Probably Halted

Government claims of victory and of enemy casualties usually are greatly exaggerated, but it was the consensus of observers that the main Communist drive against Suchow had been stopped, at least temporarily.

(The Communist radio heard in Peiping said two government divisions had gone over to the Communist side north of Suchow. It boasted that the government's Seventh Army Corps was being "annihilated" east of Suchow; and the Second Corps was being surrounded west of Suchow.

(Other Communist broadcasts heard in San Francisco said another government division was "wiped out" east of Suchow on Wednesday and that Communist columns were six miles north of Suchow. They listed 20,000 government casualties in four days and for the first time referred to the fighting as a major offensive.)

Heavy Air Concentration

A government military spokesman has estimated more than a million men engaged in the battle, describing it as the greatest single engagement in Chinese history.

Gen. Huang Pia-chao's nationalist ground troops were supported in the Grand Canal battle by probably the heaviest concentration of air power ever assembled by the government in three years of civil war.

The planes, ranging from four-engined Liberators to fighter-bombers operated from dawn to

First Time in Its History

Union Will Try Local Agent On Charge of Red Allegiance

A local AFL business agent will be tried by an international representative of his union shortly on charges he belongs to the Communist Party.

The disclosure was made yesterday by Edward S. Miller, general secretary-treasurer of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders International Union. He called it the first such hearing in the union's history.

Miller told The Washington Post from Cincinnati that he has "evidence" William S. Johnson, of 553 24th st. ne., business agent of Local 209, Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Employes Union, belongs to the Communist Party.

A constitutional provision adopted at the union's convention in April 1947, bars Communists from membership, Miller said. He reported that Johnson was among those who fought the provision.

Should the charges prove true, Miller said, Johnson will be ousted from the union—in which he has held office for some six years. However, he will be permitted an appeal to the general executive board of the international.

Johnson, in his office at 1215 I st. nw., refused to comment on reports of the impending hearing.

Tojo Among 7 to Hang; None Freed

16 Jap Warlords Given Life Terms; Hirohito Censured By Tribunal's Head

Tokyo, Nov. 12 (AP).—Hideki Tojo was sentenced today to hang as chief of the criminal Japanese military clique whose dream of ruthless conquest wrecked their own country and tumbled all East Asia into chaos.

Six of his fellow conspirators were sentenced to the gallows with him. No execution date was set.

Sixteen got life imprisonment; one a 20-year term, and another 7 years. The tribunal president, Sir William Webb of Australia, filed a separate opinion stating in effect that Emperor Hirohito—not on trial—was morally responsible but politically immune.

None of the 25 defendants was acquitted by the 11-man international military tribunal which spent 2½ years trying them.

November 19 Appeal Date

After the interminable months of wordy trial, it took just 21 tense and dramatic minutes for the court to convict and pronounce the sentences.

General MacArthur, commander of the Allied occupation of defeated Japan, set November 19 as the deadline for appeals. MacArthur is the sole reviewing authority. He has power to reduce but not to increase sentences. MacArthur called a conference of the Allied Council and heads of all Allied missions for November 22. His final decision, and possibly the execution date, is expected after that meeting.

Tojo, the slight, bald little man whose arrogant cunning won him the Japanese nickname "The Razor," scorned in advance any plea for clemency from the man who engineered his defeat.

Anticipating the death sentence he got, he told his attorney to make an appeal based on his contention that Japan fought in self-defense, but positively not to ask MacArthur's mercy.

Others Sentenced

In addition to Tojo, those sentenced to hang were Gens. Kenji Doihara, Seishiro Itagaki, Heitaro Kimura, Iwane Matsui, Akiro Muto and former Premier Koki Hirota.

Life sentences went to Gen. Sadao Araki, Col. Kingoro Hashimoto, Gen. Shunroku Hata, former Premier Kiichiro Hiranuma, former cabinet member Naoki Hoshino, Marquis Koichi Kido, Gen. Kuniaki Koiso, Gen. Jiro Minami, Admiral Takasumi Oaka, former Ambassador Hiroshi Oshima, Gen. Kenryo Sato, Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, former Finance Minister Okinori Kaya, former Ambassador Toshio Shiratori, Gen. Teiichi Suzuki and Gen. Yoshijiro Umezu.

Shigenori Togo got 20 years and peg-legged Mamoru Shigemitsu 7 years. Both these former Foreign Ministers will get time off for the nearly three years already served. Aged and ailing, neither seems likely to survive his remaining term.

The prisoners were led forward one by one to hear their sentences. The jammed courtroom was hushed as Sir William intoned each sentence in alphabetical order.

The hush became almost a living

Union Dock Workers Are Called Out From Maine to Virginia

South, Gulf Crews To Join If Needed, Leader Says; Army Ships to Be Loaded

New York, Nov. 13 (Saturday), (AP).—A longshoremen's strike expected to tie up docks from Maine to Virginia became effective at 12:01 a. m. today.

The walkout threatens to paralyze a large segment of the Nations multi-million-dollar shipping industry. But effects were not expected to be widespread until Monday because of a normal weekend lull in ship-loading activities.

South Atlantic and Gulf ports apparently will not be immediately affected by the walkout.

A New Orleans official of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association said dock workers there would abide by an agreement running through December 9.

Galveston workers were expected to stand by a similar agreement and a Gulfport, Miss., shipping official said no strike action was contemplated by union men there.

Won't Call Out South Yet

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the union, who ordered the East Coast strike, said he didn't intend to call out the South and Gulf port workers now.

He added, however, that "they'll come out if we need them. So far there's no need of help from that source, and there's no use involving anyone else in our troubles."

He also said the East Coast strikers would assist only in the movement of Army shipments, not including Marshall Plan aid as was previously announced.

"As long as we're having a strike, let's have a strike," he said without further comment or explanation.

There are 65,000 workers in the AFL group ordered out on the East Coast. Several thousand already had quit. The strike follows membership rejection of a new wage agreement and other contract provisions worked out earlier this week by union and employer representatives.

Earlier Ryan said:

"The President will have to get into this thing."

Ryan told a news conference that he and his negotiating committee had expected to receive an appeal from Washington requesting a 15 or 20-day back-to-work period while a board was formed with power to recommend solutions to the dispute.

'Men Not in Mood'

He added, however, that "our men are not in the mood to go back to work for 20 days."

Announcement of the rejection of the wage settlement by the East Coast longshoremen followed shortly an order by the Association of American Railroads halting shipment to New York and Boston of nearly all freight for export.

The embargo becomes effective Saturday.

Freight for export from those ports will not be accepted by the railroads unless it is consigned to the United States armed forces and comes within certain exceptions from the embargo order.

Exceptions include grain, soybeans, flaxseed and rice in bulk when covered by permits issued by operators of elevators where they are to be unloaded; petroleum or petroleum products in tank cars when they are to be unloaded from these cars before overseas shipment; and coal or coke in bulk.

Harry Durning, collector of customs for the New York port, said 202 vessels were in the harbor.

He said the work stoppage was "severely affecting all shipping."

Asked if this included Marshall Plan ships, he said "Yes."

Truman Ends 10-Month Delay In Widow's Army Insurance

By John London
Post Reporter

A Washington widow stymied for 10 months in efforts to collect her husband's Army insurance and other Government funds due her finally got action yesterday when President Truman intervened.

The Veterans' Administration suddenly announced Mrs. John S. Power, 3432 Baker st. se., would get first payment Monday on the $10,000 insurance policy held by her husband, civilian economist with the Army, killed in a Paris plane crash January 6.

President Truman interceded when his attention was called to the plight of Mrs. Power, revealed in the Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz in Thursday's Washington Post. After reading the article by Columnist Kluttz—a tale of interminable Government delay and red tape, the President took a hand in the case, his aides revealed at Key West, Fla., where the Chief Executive is visiting.

Mr. Truman ordered Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and Veterans' Administrator Carl Gray to make immediate investigation—and to suggest measures to prevent recurrence of such delays in other cases.

The Veterans Administration last night admitted there might have been some unnecessary time lag in making payment, but claimed Mrs. Power didn't apply for the insurance payment until June 3, and then her forms weren't in just-so shape.

The mother of three young children, interviewed at her home, was "flabbergasted" that "in the midst of all the world's troubles the President should bother with mine."

"I don't mind being a guinea pig if it will help others in my place," she said. "Nobody short of the President could begin to cut all the red tape I've been hamstrung with."

Mrs. Power last night still had not received word from the Army on reimbursement due her husband for travel expenses dating back 14 months. Nor had she cleared a disability benefit due her husband, she said, because he was deafened in the left ear by an operation during war service with the Air Force.

Although her husband was killed 10 months ago, Mrs. Power did not receive his final pay check from the Army until last week, Kluttz revealed. She didn't receive his retirement deductions from Civil Service until a few days ago.

It took a month for the Army to make out a correct certificate of her husband's death, to enable her to file claims. The first three were riddled with errors as to his name, age and cause of death, Kluttz said.

Moreover, she said, her furniture was smashed badly when shipped by the Army from Germany to Washington. However, she said, the Army was efficient in collecting rent, $120 a month, for her Berlin quarters. And the VA still sends her late husband bills for insurance premiums.

Ironically, her husband's work with the Government was to cut red tape.

With the War Production Board, then later with the military government in Germany, a major part of his assignment, she said, was to simplify and then write explanations of priority procedures. An economist with a master's degree in science education, he previously worked for the Civilian Conservation Corps and the Office of Education.

Mrs. Power, an attractive, hazel-eyed brunette, had nothing but praise for the Bureau of Employes Compensation—"the only Government people to show any interest or helpfulness."

"The main difficulty with the Army and Veterans' Administration," she said, "was that there is no one place or one person who knows how to handle all the forms—I must have had 50—in a case like mine.

"I've had all this trouble even with the help of friends in Gov-

Rush to Enter Flight Schools Slows Down

Lure of Dollars, Safe Career Explains Drop in Recruits

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Is the "wild blue yonder" losing its appeal to millions of young Americans?

Air Force recruiters are wondering what has become of the vast numbers of red-blooded youngsters who formerly fought for USAF flying cadet appointments. Today, flight schools are up to capacity, but quotas are met with some difficulty, officials said.

Apparently, they say, the lure of the dollar and a safe career looks better to men in the early twenties today than the glamour of being a "buzz-boy."

Yesterday, the Air Force announced another modification of its eligibility rules aimed at bringing in more applicants. Married men now can qualify.

Twice before since the end of the war, this proposal was advanced by pilot procurement officials but top Air Force officials turned down the plan.

Other remedies have been attempted. Intensive advertising drives, employing newspapers, magazines and radio, have been launched. Traveling teams of examiners and recruiters have been established. Commissions in the Regular Air Force have been offered to those standing highest in flight classes.

These innovations have helped

Russia Replaces Vassilevsky as Army Staff Chief

London, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—The USSR Council of Ministers has relieved Marshal Alexander M. Vassilevsky as chief of the Soviet army general staff "in view of overburdening work," Radio Moscow reported tonight. The decree said that Vassilevsky would retain his post as first deputy minister of the armed forces.

Newly appoited Gen. S. M. Shtemenko was named chief of the general staff in Vassilevsky's place. He also was appointed a deputy minister of the armed forces.

A Grave Peril

Reds Worst In China, Says Koo

Wellington Koo, the Chinese Ambassador, said last night "the Communist menace in China is the gravest of its kind in any part of the world."

The Ambassador's comment came a few hours after Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) had proposed that President Truman call Congress into special session at once to increase American help to China.

Koo said he had no comment to make on the special session proposal but did declare in a statement that China "in the face of the Communist armed revolt to seize control of the whole country, has urgent need of and would welcome more aid and assistance given promptly."

dusk out of Nanking's military airfield.

The army paper, Peace Daily, said the heavest fighting was near Paichi, 30 and 35 miles east of Suchow. It said waves of Communists made more than 20 successive attacks, using "human sea" (massed troop) tactics.

Each of these assaults was beaten back, the paper stated.

The Catholic newspaper, Yi Shih Pao, reported Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek flew to Suchow at the height of the battle and directed his generals to throw in more men.

The capital and Shanghai remained quiet under martial law, but foreign residents continued to leave for fear the transportation system would collapse if the Communists got closer.

Politically there were no developments as it was a national holiday—the birthday of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, father of the Chinese Republic.

Expert Predicts Jet Transport Within 6 Years

Los Angeles, Nov. 12 (AP).—A leading aircraft engineer said today a jet transport of transatlantic range and twice the speed of present airliners could be put into service within six years.

Hall Hibbard, engineering vice president of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., made this observation in discussing with reporters foreseeable developments in jet engines and high-speed planes.

He said that, in addition to the extra speed, the jet plane could be operated with fares 25 per cent less than present rates.

'Red Dean' Says Russia Can Withstand A-Bomb

New York, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union is too big to be overcome by atomic bombs, Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the "Red Dean" of Canterbury, said today.

Russia and China are the only countries whose size and dispersement of population makes them invulnerable to atomic attack, he said in an address before 600 University of Toronto students shortly before leaving by plane for New York.

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The United States has made a shipment of 5000 tons of small arms ammunition to the hard-pressed Nationalist forces in China, the Department of Defense announced yesterday.

Disclosure of this shipment and plans for additional shipments in the near future was made by Secretary James V. Forrestal shortly after Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) urged President Truman to call an immediate special session of the Eightieth Congress to consider aid to China.

Fears Communist Conquest

Bridges, chairman of the special "watchdog congressional committee" on foreign aid, said he feared the Communists would take over "the whole of China, lock, stock and barrel," unless American aid is effective immediately.

The chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, who helped steer the 400-million-dollar China aid program through the Eightieth Congress, left the special session decision squarely up to President Truman.

There was no indication that he had cleared his proposal with the Republican high command in Congress, although under the terms of the adjournment resolution the GOP leadership can call the lawmakers to a "lame duck" session before the end of the year. In January, the Democrats will take over the leadership of the new Congress.

A White House spokesman at President Truman's Key West, Fla., vacation retreat said the President had no comment on the special session proposal.

State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said the department had not "yet" considered Bridges' statement. He said all the department knew about it was what it had read in the newspapers.

Some leading GOP foreign policy experts in Congress expressed doubt that so serious a problem could be adequately considered in a short special session call.

Bridges charged the Administration had ignored the Chinese situation and that conditions there are "far more desperate than has been reported to the public."

Suggests MacArthur

The New Hampshire Republican said a top military representative of the United States should be sent to China to confer with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He suggested that Gen. Douglas MacArthur or Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer should be among those considered.

Meanwhile Chinese Ambassador Wellington Koo said he spent 45 minutes with Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett yesterday explaining "the gravity of the situation in China and the importance of immediate American aid—both material and moral—to the Chinese cause."

The United States, the envoy said, is doing its best to speed up deliveries of the 125 million dollars worth of arms and 275 million dollars worth of economic goods ticketed for his country.

Has $14,000,000 Left

At the State Department it was announced that an application from China to buy $284,460 worth of arms in this country has been approved. China has drawn $110,835,605 of the 125 million dollars Congress voted it for military aid.

It was reported a week ago that the Government would ship Chinese military aid in Army or Navy ships to avoid the West Coast shipping strike, and that the shipments, originally intended for December, would be moved ahead to November.

Marshall Calls Red Peace Talk Propaganda

Paris, Nov. 12 (AP).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall declared today Russia is waging a dangerous propaganda peace offensive with the real aim of wrecking the world position of the United States.

Russia's action in spreading a report of a suggested Truman-Stalin meeting is part of this propaganda drive, Marshall said.

He gave his views at an extraordinary news conference at the same time his deputy delegate, Frederick H. Osborn, accused Soviet leaders of carrying on a second type of propaganda effort at home—that of using "shrill government-directed propaganda to prepare" the Russian people for war. Osborn blasted at Russia during debate on the disarmament issue in the Political Committee of the United Nations Assembly.

Marshall said Soviet propaganda in the U. N. has not been successful. The great majority of nations in the world organization, he continued, have lined up solidly in their opinions on the world situation.

The Secretary defined propaganda peace offensive as procedures designed to play upon the general desire for peace with the real purpose of wrecking the position of the United States.

Such propaganda efforts are very dangerous, he continued, because everyone wants peace but not mere propaganda for peace.

The Secretary talked for about 30 minutes to about 30 American newsmen crowded into the press-room of the United States delegation to the U. N. He ranged over the world in his comments but the majority of his remarks were strictly off the record—that is, not for publication in any way.

He withheld permission to use any of his remarks—except when attributed to a "leading United Nations delegate"—until he had checked the long transcript. Then, about six hours after the conference, a condensed version of his statements was read out to newsmen by an American delegation spokesman. The spokesman said Marshall still did not permit direct quotations.

In brief Marshall said:

1. The Russians grabbed up suggestions that President Truman and Prime Minister Stalin meet and used them for propaganda.

2. Russian propaganda in the U. N. Assembly has not been successful. That is one reason why Stalin issued his interview last month accusing United States leaders of being aggressors.

3. The Eastern bloc and the Communists increase their efforts to obstruct and destroy the European Recovery Program each time it makes a forward step.

4. The European Recovery Program has made greater progress than is generally realized.

5. The United States is determined that the Berlin airlift will go ahead as long as is necessary.

6. The United States is looking to six neutral countries in the U. N. Security Council to see what they might propose in the Berlin crisis.

7. The Greek problem is just one part of the big, world-wide problem affecting Russia-United States relations.

Reports of the possibility of a meeting between President Truman and Prime Minister Stalin to discuss world problems snowballed this week after a Washington Times-Herald columnist said such a conference might be held.

The column was picked up by Tass, the Soviet news agency, and given prominent play in the newspapers of Russia and her satellites. White House aides with Mr. Truman at Key West, Fla., said the President has stated repeatedly he would be glad to talk to Stalin any time the Soviet leader wishes to visit the United States. Mr. Truman also has said he will not leave the United States again for such a meeting.

Marshall talked Mr. Truman out of one plan to send Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson to Russia during the closing days of the presidential campaign.

Asked today what his reactions were to reports of a possible new United States mission to Moscow, Marshall replied there is no discussion other than in the press regarding such a mission.

Osborn, the United States delegation's specialist on atomic questions, told the political committee the Russian worker "is kept in constant fear of war by the Soviet government." A Russian, he added, "hears only the news the government wants him to hear."

Pointing out that there was some evidence Russian leaders may be holding a "warped, twisted view of conditions outside the Soviet Union," the American delegate said he wondered whether members of the Politbureau believe the world is ready to attack the Soviet Union. "I am reluctant to believe that is so," he said.

United States representatives in Russia saw improvements in conditions there after the war, Osborn said, but this improvement has slackened now "because so much Soviet production is going into war production."

The committee is debating a Soviet proposal that the United States, Britain, France, Russia and China slash their armaments by one-third within a year and outlaw the atomic bomb.

Osborn said there could be no disarmament until Russia stops threatening the world with Communist aggression. He pointed out that Russia has four million men under arms and that Soviet-dominated states have an additional 2,800,000.

Efforts were being made to find some basis of compromise for the Big Four dispute over Berlin. Dr. Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina, said tonight in a broadcast beamed to South American he is working toward a peaceful effort to solve the problem in agreement with the Western powers' desire that the issue should not be discussed outside the Security Council.

Bramuglia saw Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky at the Russian Embassy tonight. The results of their meeting were not disclosed. However, it is known the Argentine delegate sounded out Vishinsky about the chances of a new approach to a peaceful solution of the Berlin question.

Dense Fog Cuts Airlift Operations

Wiesbaden, Germany, Nov. 12 (AP).—November weather—Germany's worst for flying—was beginning to tell on Berlin airlift operations today as volunteer American pilots battled blinding fog to keep the shuttle service moving.

A dense "pea-souper" has smothered two American airlift supply centers since Wednesday.

The fog also cut down Soviet air activity, reducing the likelihood of a test of the new Soviet policy of forcing down any planes straying from the air lanes.

American pilots reported they saw fighter aircraft twice today in the airlift corridors near Berlin. The Air Force said the planes were presumably Soviet, but attached "no significance" to their presence.

To keep west Berlin on a bare subsistence level, a minimum of 4000 tons of food and fuel are needed. In the first 10 days this month, the combined Anglo-American airlift only averaged 3728 tons a day. Yesterday it dropped to 2241 tons. The figure today will be lower still.

However, the blockaded capital has a stockpile on hand, built up during good flying weather, that is sufficient for more than a month.

Smith Reaches Berlin To See Clay, Forrestal

Berlin, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, United States Ambassador to Russia, arrived today from Moscow, and said he saw no signs there that the Berlin blockade would be lifted

He planned to remain here over the weekend before flying to Paris for conferences with United States Secretary of State George C. Marshall. He was expected to confer here with Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American military governor, and Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, who is scheduled to arrive from London tomorrow.

Bizonia Protest Strike Ends

Frankfurt, (Saturday), Nov. 13 (AP).—A one-day strike by millions of western Germans protesting high prices in the American and British occupation zones ended peacefully at midnight Friday.

The strike, in which both industrial and shop workers participated, was the largest Germany has known since pre-Hitler days. Labor leaders said eight million were involved.

The strike had virtually paralyzed industry in the two zones.

A union ban on demonstrations, parades and picketing made the strike anything but spectacular.

Dr. Hans Boeckler, chairman of the Bizonal Trade Union Council, said it was but the first of a series of union actions aimed at forcing the German bizonal economic administration to lower prices.

Reports from city after city said the day was as quiet as a Sunday. Shop doors were closed. Streets were nearly deserted. Streetcars and buses were idle. Workers stayed at home.

Industrial Ruhr valley coal and steel workers answered the strike call, causing a loss of 300,000 tons of coal and 15,000 tons of steel badly needed for the European Recovery Program.

Orderly Cherishes Years With Ike

SERGT. MICHAEL McKEOGH
'Ike's' right-hand man

Staff Sergt. Michael J. McKeogh, wartime orderly to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, is a civilian now but one who cherishes the memory of four years of soldiering centering on "the Boss."

Mentioned frequently in Eisenhower's memoirs "Crusade in Europe," McKeogh now is a salesman for Radio Station KIST in Santa Barbara, Calif., an enterprise operated by former Capt. Harry Butcher, who was naval aide to the supreme commander. It's a job he likes fine, better than hopping bells in New York's Plaza Hotel, where the draft found him in 1941.

After all these years and at the distance of a continent's span, what does he think of "the Boss" now?

"Well, McKeogh told The Washington Post by telephone yesterday, 'he was the best boss in the world. There never has been and never will be another man like him as far as I am concerned.'"

Ike Bore Troubles Unaided

The former sergeant remembered the incident related by Eisenhower in which he was refused an apartment because "Eisenhower's valet" couldn't come up to the social level demanded by his prospective landlady. He said it happened in Santa Barbara and laughed about it and said it didn't make any difference anyway because he found a better place.

McKeogh, known to Eisenhower and his staff as "Mickey," said he knew his boss often was worried by the responsibilities he carried and the difficulties he faced as supreme Allied commander. But, said Mickey, "he was never cross or rude to anybody and he never tried to get rid of his troubles by unloading them on somebody else." The General, McKeogh said, "carried his problems in his head."

Married WAC Sergeant

When the war was over Mickey came home bringing his wife, former WAC Sergt. Pearlie Hargrave, whon he had married in Europe. For a time he worked at the Headquarters Restaurant in New York, operated by two of Eisenhower's former chefs. Then, in September, 1946, he went to California, where he has since lived. He and Mrs. McKeogh have a three-year-old daughter.

Mickey recalled his first meeting with his boss in June, 1941, when he was detailed as his orderly at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex. He said Eisenhower asked him his name and called him "Mickey" from that time on. Eisenhower was then a colonel but "looked more like a businessman than an officer until he smiled."

Mickey agrees that he knows "the Boss" about as well as one man can know another.

"You see," he said, "I practically lived with him for four years and I saw him first thing in the morning and last thing at night. There was never anybody like him."

Government Of Greece Collapses

Athens, Nov. 12 (AP).—Premier Themistokles Sophoulis of Greece handed in the resignation of his government today because rebels in his own Liberal Party charged he had failed to crush the Communist guerillas.

Sophocles Venizelos, deputy leader of the party, had weaned away enough Liberals to combine with the opposition and force the fall of the government on a vote of confidence. He charged that the coalition government, formed 14 months ago by Liberals and their political rivals, the Populists, had failed to make good on its promises to pacify Greece.

The 87-year-old Sophoulis had announced two weeks ago he was going to quit, but had remained in office under a truce with Venizelos until the United Nations debate on Greece in Paris was ended.

King Paul has summoned home Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris, Premier before Sophoulis and the nation's representative at the U. N. Tsaldaris was leader of the Populists (monarchists) in the coalition.

There are 354 members of Parliament. The Populists, largest single party, hold 132 seats, the Liberals 84, Democrat-Socialists 30, National Liberals 24, Gen. Napoleon Zervas' Nationalists 21, Spyros Markezinis' rightist New Party 19, Independents 27, Nationalist Party 10, National Union 7.

Sophoulis said his followers remained within the Liberal Party and would support a new government willing to drop party politics in the interest of efficiency.

The coalition government was formed September 7, 1947, when the United States aid mission brought pressure on the Populists and Liberals to submerge their long and bitter rivalry in a coalition.

Private U. N. Talks On Balkans Begun

Paris, Nov. 12 (AP).—Preliminary talks toward a settlement between Greece and her northern neighbors began in private today at the United Nations.

Dr. Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, president of the General Assembly and chief initiator of the negotiations, described the first results as encouraging.

Allies Hiring Vienna Spies, Reds Charge

Vienna, Nov. 12 (AP).—Russia accused the western powers today of hiring Austrian government officials as spies.

The American, British and French high commissioners quickly denied the charge. United States Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes said he could "not accept this slur of the Soviet element." He demanded that if the Russians had any grounds for such charges, they lay the case before the Allied Council.

The exchange arose in the Allied Council, which was discussing the arrest a week ago of Dr. Margarethe Ottilliger, section chief in the Ministry of Economic Planning. Soviet Col. Gen. Vladimir Kurrasov asserted:

"I should like to state that, in order to prevent the recurrence of similar cases, I should like to recommend to some gentlemen present here to give instructions to some of their agencies not to recruit Austrian officials into activities directed against some occupying powers in Austria."

He rejected a request to transfer the official to the custody of Austria. Austrian and western officials expressed belief she is being held for questioning about German external assets and Marshall Plan figures. She is an expert on both. hTic-ert thing as Tojo stood alone in the prisoner's dock. He bowed slightly to the bench and then slouched as headphones were adjusted for him to hear the sentence in Japanese translation.

Also sentenced to die on the gallows are Gen. Heitaro Kimura, vice minister of war throughout Tojo's premiership; Gen. Kenji Doihara, undercover expert in China and Manchuria, called the "bird of evil omen" by the Chinese; and Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, former war minister and chief of staff of the Kwangtung Army.

"Defendant Hideki Tojo, the tribunal having found you guilty on counts of the indictment, sentences you to death by hanging," Webb stated.

Tojo's face was blankly rigid. He nodded briefly to show he had understood the translated words, then left the dock. He showed no emotion whatever.

Incidents were few and small. The president pounded with his gavel when a rustling gasp from the crowd interrupted his first sentence of life for Sadao Araki.

Jiro Minami, the gray-bearded onetime "unofficial emperor," was so befuddled that MP's had to put the earphones on him.

Two Judges Disagree

Hiroshi Oshima, onetime confidante of Hitler, stalked from the box without the little bow the others made.

Mamoru Shigemitsu, who got off lightest of all, leaned on a crutch and steadied himself with his finger tips against the bench He lost a leg in a bombing incident in Shanghai in 1932. It was he who signed Japan's surrender on the battleship Missouri.

Tojo was acquitted on only one of the nine counts remaining against him, that of waging aggressive war against Russia in 1939.

He and others were convicted on counts ranging from conspiring to wage aggressive warfare from 1931 through 1945 to simple atrocities.

Justices Delfin Jaranilla of the Philippines and R. B. Pal of India disagreed with the majority opinion. Jaranilla said some sentences were too lenient, but did not say which ones.

Pal, in a dissent which was longer even than the 300,000-word majority judgment, contended that Japan had been no more aggressive than other world powers, that her leaders had not usurped the government as charged, and that the judgment might point the means for some future revenge by the Japanese.

Eisenhower Finds Censoring of Political News a Mistake

day brought new complaints, most of them well founded, of continued injustices, lack of good faith, and lip service without performance. We determined to begin elimination of the most objectionable characters but were desperate over our failure to find satisfactory substitutes.

Moreover, always we had to move in the knowledge that we were ostensibly in the land of an ally: we had neither the authority nor the responsibilities implicit in a military occupaton. Nevertheless we early told Darlan he had to get rid of Chatel, governor of Algeria, and Nogues, Minister to the Sultan of Morocco.

In this type of problem General Giraud was no help. He hated politics; not merely crookedness and chicanery in politics, but every part of the necessary task of developing an orderly, democratic system of government applicable to the North African kaleidoscope. He merely wanted supplies and equipment to develop fighting divisions and, provided he could get these, he had no interest in the governmental organization or its personnel. His purpose was pure but his capacity for larger administrative and organizational tasks was doubtful.

Darlan Slain, Attack Abandoned Same Day

Darlan was assassinated on December 24, the same day that I was compelled to abandon all thought of immediate attack in northern Tunisia. I was at the headquarters of British 5 Corps near Beja when notice of his death reached me and I immediately started for Algiers. I arrived there after 30 hours of nonstop driving through rain, snow and sleet.

My entire acquaintanceship with Darlan covered a period of six weeks. His reputation was that of a notorious collaborator with Hitler, but during the time that he served as the administrator of French North Africa he never once, to our knowledge, violated any commitment or promise.

On the other hand, his mannerisms and personality did not inspire confidence and in view of his reputation we were always uneasy in dealing with him. In any event, his death presented me with new problems.

While it was known, of course, that the person in the French government I trusted most was General Giraud, my headquarters was still in no position to sponsor a puppet government. Such a resort to Nazi methods would have been a far more serious violation of the principles for which we were fighting than would the mere temporary acceptance of some individual whose past record was, from our viewpoint, distasteful.

Governor a Weakling And Trusted by None

The governor in Algeria, Chatel, was a weakling who held the trust of none of us. He and General Nogues were two individuals we were determined to get rid of quickly, even though in the case of the latter General Patton constantly insisted that he was working effectively for the Allies in Morocco.

In the search for satisfactory individuals we decided to bring Marcel Peyrouton to Algiers. It was reported to me that Peyrouton was then a virtual exile in Argentina, unable to go back to France because of the enmity of Laval, Hitler's most evil puppet. It was also reported that he had previously established a reputation in North Africa as a skillful colonial administrator.

Nevertheless he had been, for a considerable time, a member of the Vichy government and was therefore regarded in the democratic world as a Fascist. We explained our problem to the State Department and after some exchange of messages on the subject were informed that the State Department was in agreement with us.

Bringing Peyrouton to Algeria as governor was a mistake, even though he was a vast improvement over his soft and vacillating predecessor. It was difficult indeed to find men who had any experience in French colonial administration and at the same time bore no trace of the Vichy trademark.

In this period I made another error, even though from a good motive. It was the application of censorship to political news from North Africa for a period of six weeks. Because of personal dislike of censorship, I had to be convinced that the reason for such action was important. In this case it was.

The plan of my political advisers and myself was to promote an eventual union between the local French administration and the De Gaulle forces in London. It was, we felt, a difficult but necessary development.

The local antagonism in the French army and in all echelons of government against De Gaulle was intense, but he enjoyed a distinct popularity with the civilians and this sentiment progressively increased as prospects of Allied success brightened. Through every possible outlet open to them the De Gaulle forces in London and central Africa were fiercely attacking every French military and civil official in Africa, and the latter wanted to reply, publicily, in terms no less harsh.

I believed that to permit the growth of such a public name-calling contest would create conditions which would make future reconcilation impossible. By imposing political censorship on all I prevented local French officials from participating in the public quarrel. They argued bitterly, as did the press representatives in the theater.

I think the censorship had some of the desired effect, and it was lifted the second I learned that Giraud and De Gaulle had agreed to meet at Casablanca. The reasons for the censorship could not be explained, however, and were of course misinterpreted at home.

Limits of Stamina Sadly Realized

The Christmas season brought to me the dismaying realization that there are certain limits of physical stamina that cannot safely be exceeded. I inherited a hardy constitution from sturdy forebears and, heretofore always careful of health requisites, I had come to believe myself immune from the fatigues and exhaustions that I frequently observed in others. Long hours and incessant work were easily enough sustained, I thought, so long as one refused to fall victims to useless worry or to waste his strength in any kind of excess.

But as the December weeks kept me constantly on the road or in the air and shorter and shorter hours of sleep became broken by an unaccustomed nervousness, I definitely felt a deterioration in vigor that I could not overcome. On Christmas Day I contracted a severe case of flu, and, convinced that I must not go to bed, I finally became really ill.

The doctors then took charge. For four days they would not let me move, and during that time I not only recovered my health, I learned a lesson I did not thereafter violate: a full measure of health is basic to successful command. I did not have another sick day—aside from minor accidents —during the war.

Sergt. Michael McKeogh was my orderly, who accompanied me always and was close by my side, day and night. One day in Africa I had to make a hurried trip to the front and I telephoned to Sergeant McKeogh to bring a bag to the airfield. Flying conditions were deplorable and, in the total absence of flying aids in the mountainous country of Tunisia, the prospect of the flight was not enjoyable. When I got to the plane I found Sergeant McKeogh also prepared to make the journey. I said, "Mickey, I intend to return tomorrow, and I doubt that I will need you before then. Flying conditions are not comfortable and there is no use in both of us being miserable. You may go back to quarters."

The sergeant seemed to pale a bit, but he looked me squarely in the eye and said, "Sir, my mother wrote me that my job in this war was to take care of you. And she said also, 'If General Eisenhower doesn't come back from this war, don't you dare to come back.'"

The impact of such loyalty and devotion, not only on the part of the sergeant but on the part of the mother who could say such a thing to her son, left me almost speechless. All I did say was, "Well, hop into the plane. We're late."

Many months after the war was over I heard that a landlady had denied Sergeant McKeogh and his family permission to stay temporarily in one of her apartments on the ground that "after all, he was merely General Eisenhower's valet. I must maintain the proper social atmosphere in my properties." I trust that the lady is not concerned over the relative standing of herself and Sergeant McKeogh in my affections, respect, and admiration!

In January, 1943, the President and the Prime Minister met at Casablanca for one of the great political meetings of the war. General Eisenhower was there, and he describes the debate on the grand strategy of the war in the next installment of "Crusade in Europe," to be published here tomorrow.

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book to be published November 22, 1948, by Doubleday & Co. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

2 Airfields Held Not Duplicating

For U. S. Approval

Secret Session Held to Draft Atlantic Pact

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—Plans for a North Atlantic defense pact calling for United States and Canadian military support if western Europe is attacked moved swiftly ahead today.

The permanent committee of the Brussels pact powers—Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg—met in secrecy to draft an alliance proposal that they hoped would be acceptable to the United States and Canada.

United States Defense Secretary James Forrestal arrived in London from Paris for conferences with Prime Minister Clement Attlee and United States military representatives.

Persistent reports circulated in diplomatic circles that Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin will attend a transatlantic pact conference that Washington and Ottawa sources predict will write the final text of the treaty before Christmas in the American capital.

The classic example of armed forces duplication—separate commands at the adjacent Anacostia and Bolling Field airbases—has been officially been determined to be no duplication at all.

A detailed study of the situation by the Joint Chiefs of Staff just submitted to Defense Secretary Forrestal recommends against merger of the two airfields.

"The present saturation of facilities at both installations precludes the possibility of the consolidation of either operational activity into that of the other," concluded the report.

Some consolidation of activities at the two fields, however, might result in economies and more efficiency, it is stated. Further study of these five points is recommended:

1. Single control tower operations at night. Use of one field for takeoffs and the other for landings also is suggested.

2. Fuel storage. The aviation fuel system at Anacostia is "obsolete, inadequate for current operations and a bottleneck and menace in case of wartime operations," it is stated. Daily truck deliveries are required.

3. Crash and structural firefighting activities.

4. Post Exchange and Ship's Service functions.

5. Surplus property and salvage activities.

24-Hour Strike Grips Paris

Paris, (Saturday), Nov. 13 (AP).—A 24-hour general strike in Paris and the suburbs began at midnight.

It was called by Communist labor leaders. They said it was their answer to what they termed police brutality in an Armistice Day clash on the Champs Elysees between police and demonstrators.

Police yesterday said 95 policemen and 45 demonstrators were injured in the outbreak.

Today's French morning newspapers gave up attempts to publish as printers and distributors headed the strike call. A disruption of subway, taxi and bus services and service on the suburban train system was expected.

Gas service was expected to be maintained, but electric power failures were feared. Postal service also was expected to be hampered.

The Continental edition of the London Daily Mail and the European edition of the New York Herald Tribune were published by special agreement with the workers.

Non-Communist union leaders told their followers not to abide by the strike call.

She has three children to support in their modest southeast home—Brian, 4; Mark, 2, and Joanne, 8 weeks old. The youngest was the cause of her worst time with the Army.

"It took three months for me to convince the Army I was pregnant," she said. "They insisted I was just suffering from shock over my husband's death."

Rescuer 'Slugged'

Montreal, Nov. 12 (AP). — Arger Moreau, 40, saw a woman falling backward as a streetcar approached today. Moreau rushed forward and pulled her to safety. In the excitement the woman's arm struck him in the face. Moreau went to the hospital with a fractured nose; the woman went on her way.

Rush to Earn 'Wings' Ends

get in more applicants, but the need for young pilots is growing. Average age of Air Force fliers is 29—too old for the new jet planes today. There is a vast backlog of war-trained airmen, but they are used to the Thunderbolts and Flying Fortresses.

Last July's class had a quota of 1040. They just made it. In October, 1300 candidates finally were qualified. For next March's class, the Air Force wants 1560.

Besides accepting married men, they expect to ask Congress to boost the pay of cadets and lower the age limit. Age brackets now are 20 to 26½. Physical and mental standards have not been lowered, said the Air Force, but they are forced today to accept men with only two years' college or the equivalent. They want college graduates.

Moreover, many of the men now appointed lack even two years of college. They get in by passing examinations considered the "equivalent" of such schooling.

Lieut. Col. Robert L. Cox, in charge of aviation cadet procurement at the Pentagon, believes there are several reasons for the comparative lack if interest in winning Air Force wings.

Good economic conditions throughout the country and the higher pay offered promising college men by industry is undoubtedly a factor, he states. The fact that so many of the eligibles are veterans who can attend college or civilian flight schools at Government expense undoubtedly affects the situation.

"From the questions asked our examining teams we surmise that young men are taking a more realistic view of things than they used to," Cox said.

"They want to know about the pay scale and the prospects of a regular commission in the Air Force. Undoubtedly, there has been a sociological change. American youths feel a college degree is worth money to them and want to make the best deal they can with it."

Perhaps, he added, the airplane has lost some of its novelty and therefore there's less glamor to flying. Airmen, however are in dispute on that.

Baby Expected By Elizabeth Today or Sunday

London, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—London newspapers tonight featured a photograph of Princess Elizabeth wistfully watching the change of the guard from a Buckingham Palace window and one of them quoted her physician as saying her baby might be born Saturday.

The Evening Standard said it was "the opinion of Sir William Gilliatt that her baby will be born tomorrow or Sunday." Gilliatt, who will deliver the baby, said she was in excellent health.

Blisters Do It

Atom Action Said to Alter Earth's Form

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—A new idea, that atomic energy is changing the earth's surface, was presented to the Geological Society of America's annual meeting today.

The earth is actually growing under your feet. The atomic energy is in the form of radioactivity. It works at depths of 50 to 100 miles there melting areas of rocks thousands of miles wide that bubble upward. The bubbles make and unmake continents, ocean beds and mountain ranges.

Che changes are slow. No. geologist saw the least danger that this buried atomic energy can blow up the earth, or any part of it.

The new ideas were proposed by Dr. Bailey Willis, world-famous geologist of Stanford University, and Dr. C. W. Wolfe, a younger geologist of Boston University

Dr. Willis called his hot spots bubbles, and Dr. Wolfe called them blisters.

Dr. Wolfe's blister story holds that the atomic minerals are unevenly scattered, permitting heat to gather unevenly, and then due to natural laws of heat flow, melting a large underground area. He explained in detail to geologists how the blister can build the earth's surface, folded rocks, earthquake fault zones, and everything.

He said the African Continent may be high because it is at present the roof of a blister.

The Arctic Ocean, he said, is probably the hole where a great blister collapsed. So is the present Atlantic Ocean. Once it was a continent, raised by a blister.

The deep part of the north Pacific Ocean, he said, is probably due to a long-collapsed blister.

Dr. Wolfe said that the present rising mountain ranges on the West Coast of the United States and in Japan are outer-edge results of a big blister.

Bunche Orders Israel To Give Up Fortress

Tel Aviv, Nov. 12 (NYHT).—The Israeli government received today an order from Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting mediator, to withdraw from the Iraq Suweidan police fortress which it captured from besieged Egyptian troops two days ago.

A government spokesman admittted it was unlikely the Jews would comply. With the first direct clash between the mediator and Israelis thus approaching, a Jewish official explained that the U. N.'s right to order the withdrawal would be challenged since Israel has been guilty of no truce breach in the seizure of Iraq Suweidan.

Israel, Arab Peace Talks On, Sources in Tel Aviv Report

Tel Aviv, Israel, Nov. 12 (AP).—Despite government denials, direct exploratory talks on possibility of a separate peace are under way not only between Israel and Egypt but all the other Arab states, it was declared here today on high authority.

Diplomatic writers explained that while talks are going on they are of a preliminary nature. The talks are proceeding, the writers say, not only in Paris but elsewhere, possibly in Washington.

(Trans-Jordan and Egyptian official spokesmen have denied that any peace negotiations were under way).

Foreign Office sources say the British are doing all possible to stiffen the Arabs in their demands in any negotiations. These sources say Britain is interested in having a large military base in the southern desert which would be linked with the Trans-Jordan port of Aqaba on the Gulf of Aqaba and Gaza on the south Palestine coast.

These informants assert also that Britain is interested in bolstering Trans-Jordan's prestige by incorporating the Hebron-Bethlehem area and the Jenin-Tulkarm-Nablus triangle of central Palestine in King Abdullah's territory.

President Joined By Wife, Daughter

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Key West, Fla., Nov. 12.—The First Lady and Miss Margaret Truman arrived in Key West this afternoon.

President Truman met them in the driveway of his winter White House here at the United States submarine base, and he later escorted them to the presidential yacht, U. S. S. Williamsburg, which is docked nearby.

Mrs. Truman and Margaret will have their meals with the President in the latter's quarters ashore but will live aboard the yacht.

The winter White House is filled. Living in it, besides the Chief Executive, are Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley, Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, Dr. John R. Steelman, William D. Hassett, Clark M. Clifford, Stanley Woodward, and Eben Ayers.

Some of the President's aides are quartered aboard the Williamsburg and Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island and other guests are living in what the Navy calls Quarter L.

The First Lady and Margaret traveled by train from Washington to Miami, and then motored to Key West. They were met in Miami by Capt. Robert L. Dennison, the President's Navy aide.

Six members of the presidential party flew over to Havana, Cuba, this morning in a Navy plane. They were Senator Barkley, Senator McGrath, Leslie Biffle, Donald Dawson, administrative assistant to the President; Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the Army aide, and William Boyle, assistant to McGrath. The group returned here this evening.

Assistant White House Press Secretary Ayers made a "no comment" reply this evening when he was asked about a news story out of Washington concerning Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin. The story said that associates of Tobin were wondering whether he would be Mr. Truman's liaison with labor in fact or whether Mr. Truman would continue to depend on Dr. Steelman to advise him on labor problems.

Ayers also answered "no comment" when asked about the proposal of Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) for a special session of Congress to deal with the crisis in China brought on by Communist gains.

To judge from the atmosphere here, Mr. Truman has no intention of calling a special session of Congress for that or any other reason.

Cloture Rule Row Predicted

amendments must be germane to the subject under consideration.

4. Limit duration of debate on bills by "special orders" as the House does now.

Enforcement of Rules

5. Enforce the existing Rules of the Senate. These (a) require a speaker to stand and not sit or walk about, (b) take a Senator off his feet for unparliamentary language, (c) permit points of order against frequent quorum calls, (d) empower the chair to make drastic rulings against dilatory motions.

6. Enforce the rule that "no Senator shall speak more than twice upon any one question in debate on the same day without leave of the Senate, which shall be determined without debate."

7. Enforce the provision of Jefferson's Manual that "No one is to speak impertinently or beside the question, superfluously, or tediously."

8. Let the chair reverse the precedent, established in 1872, that a Senator cannot be called to order for irrelevancy in debate.

9. Let the chair make wise use of his power to recognize rival claimants of the floor.

10. Let there be no objections to yielding the floor, even though the Senator who has the floor consents to an interruption.

11. Resort to prolonged or continuous sessions.

In a preface to the bulletin, Ernest S. Griffith, director of the Legislative Reference Service, said the same basic cures for obstruction in the Senate have been advanced for more than a century.

"If the purpose of the present cloture rule was 'to terminate' successful filibustering,'" said Griffith, "experience shows that it has failed to achieve its purpose in 15 out of 19 times.

Cloture Rule Inadequate

"Experience also shows that a majority (of the entire membership) cloture rule would have failed of such a purpose 12 out of 19 times.

"Experience further shows that a simple majority cloture rule would have failed to stop successful filibusters in almost one third of the cases in which cloture has been invoked since 1917."

Galloway listed 37 bills that have been defeated by filibusters, not including the many appropriation bills that were talked to death or lost in the jam resulting from filibusters because they failed to include items individual Senators wanted for their States or because they considered certain grants excessive.

Filibusters Accomplish Much

"Filibusters have succeeded not only in preventing the passage of legislation," Galloway said in a footnote, "but also in preventing the organization of the Senate, the election of its officers, and the confirmation of presidential appointees.

"They have also succeeded in modifying the terms of legislation; in delaying adjournment of Congress; in forcing special sessions, the adoption of conference reports, of neutrality legislation, and of a ship subsidy; in postponing consideration of legislation, and in raising the price of silver.

"Legislation has also often been defeated or modified by the mere threat of a filibuster."

Human Side Of Gen. Mills Is Told Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

The human side of giant General Mills, Inc., was brought home to its local stockholders at a luncheon yesterday in the Statler.

Bullis

Board Chairman Harry A. Bullis shook hands personally with nearly every one of more than 200 stockholders, press and radio representatives and other guests. They ate cake together and then Bullis paraded some facts on how a modern corporation operates.

A special color motion picture helped to review General Mills' new records in the fiscal year ended May 31, 1948. Sales totaled $458,473,576 against $370,932,427 in the previous year; 12,000 employees received 42 million dollars in wages and retirement benefits, an increase of some four and a half million dollars; Costs rose to $445,405,519; net earnings amounted to $13,068,057, equal to $5.83 a common share.

New products and research were emphasized and each local stockholder received samples. During the past two fiscal years, Bullis said, General Mills invested 17 million dollars in new facilities and in improving present plants.

"This investment in new production facilities," he emphasized, "is a profession of faith in America and in the future. It is a demonstration of dynamic capitalism."

General Mills was established 20 years ago. Yesterday's stockholders' meeting here continues a program started by James F. Bell, founder of the company, in 1939 and later adopted by other industrial companies.

SHARP UPTURN: The Hecht Co. yesterday reported sales of $20,311,986 for the three months ended October 31, a gain of 23.2 per cent over the same 1947 period. For the nine months ended October 31, Hecht's sales amounted to $57,407,286, an increase of 18.8 per cent over the corresponding period last year. The company operates nine stores in the District of Columbia, Maryland and New York City.

QUOTABLE QUOTES: "Continuation of the Truman Administration for another four years means continued concentration of power, as well as governmental activity, in Washington and, therefore, continued large population and large buying power. Had Dewey been elected, it was the expectation that there would be some rather drastic Government reorganization, accompanied . . . by reduction in number of people on Uncle Sam's payroll . . . It appears probable, therefore, that virtually all lines of business here—the retail stores, real estate, automobile, banks and public utilities—will have better business during the next four years than they would have had under a new Administration."—Y. E. Booker, manager of Washington office of Alex Brown & Sons, in memorandum to his staff.

BANKER'S VIEW: More salesmanship on the part of banks is needed, members of the Virginia Bankers Association were told at a meeting in Winchester. Said William H. Neal, prominent North Carolina banker: "Salesmanship means taking our banks to the public, using modern merchandising and advertising methods to promote greater use of helpful banking service . . . Although we have today more customers in banking than ever before, there are still millions . . . who should be doing business with us that hesitate to come into our banks."

ODD LOTS: William K. Divers, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, urged savings and loan associations to join in a 1949 campaign to accumulate a record peacetime volume of new savings. He cautioned against excess zeal which might lead to offering higher-than-normal dividends to savers . . . American Petroleum Institute heard that by 1953 the industry is expected to produce 7,300,000 barrels a day, some 2,300,000 more than was produced in the peak year of 1945 . . . Philco Co. will construct a million-dollar addition to its Sandusky, Ohio, plant for production of television sets . . . Reorganization of the 780-million-dollar American & Foreign Power Co. has been appealed to the United States Court of Appeals, Boston . . . Leading bankers from every section will meet in a National Credit Conference sponsored by the American Bankers Association on December 13, 14 and 15 in Chicago.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the week ended November 6 dipped 5 per cent under the same 1947 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. For the four weeks ended November 6, local sales remained 4 per cent higher than in the corresponding period last year.

POWER FIGURES: Potomac Electric Power Co. reported October sales of 136,505,295 kilowatt hours in October, a gain of 2.47 per cent over the same 1947 month. Outside of the District of Columbia, Pepco's sales amounted to 26,878,908 kilowatt hours, an upsurge of 15 per cent over the same period last month.

C.&O. Plans Issue

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. yesterday asked Interstate Commerce Commission authority to issue and sell 40 million dollars of refunding and improvement mortgage bonds.

Month's Vigil Put Edwards on Spot

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Glen Burnie, Md., Nov. 12.—The confessed slayer of John Mahlan and Mary Kline had been under constant police surveillance for four weeks before his arrest Monday, it was disclosed today.

Thomas Alexander Edwards, the 23-year-old sugar refinery worker who has been charged with the double murder, was even arrested once and released, police said.

This story of how detectives "put him to bed and got up with him" between October 11 and last Monday, when he was rearrested, followed a 40-mile tour of Anne Arundel County today during which Edwards directed police in a reenactment of his admitted activities the night of September 17.

Edwards confessed yesterday to the pistol slaying of the youthful Glen Burnie couple while they were parked in a car on a date that night.

"Perfect" Reenactment

Handcuffed to Chief John H. Souers of Anne Arundel County police, he left Baltimore city headquarters this morning in a limousine with Henry J. Kriss, captain of detectives, and three other persons.

After the trip was over, Captain Kriss, asked if the reconstruction corroborated the story previously told by Edwards, remarked:

"Perfect."

Detective Lieut. Frank T. Smith, who worked on the case with county and State police at the behest of Governor Lane, told of clinching the evidence which led to the murder charge.

He said investigators first picked up Edwards October 11 on a tip that he owned a pistol of foreign make and caliber fitting the slugs which were taken from the victims' heads.

Sale of Gun Claimed

Edwards denied having hte pistol at the time, but admitted he had sold such a gun to a man who worked aboard a ship in Baltimore Harbor, according to police.

The refining company that employed Edwards obligingly halted loading of a ship to permit detectives to line up workers aboard, police recalled. When confronted with the men, Edwards was unable to identify the man to whom he allegedly sold the pistol.

A thorough scouring of longshoremen's union halls and waterfront establishments failed to produce the man.

Police said they then released Edwards, but trailed him constantly for the next four weeks. He apparently believed he was no longer suspected, police said.

The tipoff came, Schmidt added, when Edwards was seen returning to the scene where he first came across the couple—half a mile from his home in the village of Marley—and to search the ground. Police, watching, surmised he was looking for the cartridge that housed the bullet fatal to Mahlan.

Police, who found a cartridge near the spot where the couple's bodies were discovered three days after they disappeared, surmise it fits the slug taken from Miss Kline's head. She allegedly was killed there, some 21 miles from the spot Mahlan is said to have met his death.

Routes covered and sites investigated today were pointed out to police by Edwards, who remained as casual and emotionless throughout the tour as if he were sightseeing.

He first took police to a narrow road leading off Marley Neck road near the village of Marley. The spot is about 2 miles from Route 648, known as Old Annapolis road. There, Edwards led his escorts into the wooded lane about 15 yards. Police said it was the spot he came across the couple parked in Mahlan's car, and it was here he had said he shot Mahlan in the head.

Edwards then directed the now-expanding motorcade back to Route 648, through the Glen Burnie Junior High School grounds—where some 500 children were interrupted in their recess by the procession.

Car's Position Determined

The next stop, about 21 miles from the first, was reached by driving southward on Crain Highway (U. S. 301), turning left at Defense Highway (U. S. 50) and again left for about 200 yards on Chesterfield Road alongside the North River.

A car was driven into a clearing, and Edwards said its position resembled that of Mahlan's car when the suspect allegedly dumped the couple's bodies onto the ground.

It was here, according to Edwards' confession, that he forced Mahlan's body out of the front seat and then pulled Miss Kline from the rear seat out the other side. He then discovered that she was only unconscious from the blow which he had struck earlier with his pistol, his statement said.

Edwards then directed police back to Route 648, near the village of Lipin's Corner. He pointed out a roadside spot as that where Mahlan's car was found, pierced with two bullet holes, the morning after the couple disappeared.

2½ Miles From Thicket

It was about 2½ miles from the thicket where he said he first encountered the couple shortly before midnight on September 17.

Edwards then was returned to the Anne Arundel County lockup at 1:40 p. m. He was later taken to Annapolis for photographs and fingerprinting. He was lodged in Baltimore City jail about 6 p. m.

Police immediately turned their efforts to verify Edwards' original contention that his motive was robbery. Mahlan's wallet, said to have contained about $2, and Miss Kline's wrist watch both are still missing.

Edwards since has denied robbing them and has maintained he does not possess the wallet or watch, police said.

Medical reports have shown that the Kline girl was not raped.

Mahlan, a 25-year-old postal clerk in Glen Burnie, and Miss Kline, 18, a typist, went out on a date about 9 p. m. September 17. His car was found the next day, and their bodies were discovered by a highway worker three days later.

2 Baltimore Radio Stations Attack Basis of News Curbs

Baltimore, Nov. 12 (AP). — Two radio stations today pleaded that Baltimore court restrictions on news about crime are unconstitutional and discriminatory.

Five local stations and a radio news commentator have been cited for contempt because of news they broadcast in July about the arrest of Eugene James, who subsequently was sentenced to hang for the knife slaying of an 11-year-old girl.

The Baltimore Supreme Bench has a set of rules designed to guarantee the right of an accused to a fair trial. They prohibit saying anything about the actions of an accused man from the time he is arrested until he comes up for trial, the reporting of any statements he makes, the disclosure of evidence against him, or comments of attorneys about conduct of the case.

In their answers to the contempt citation, filed today, Stations WFBR and WCBM said the rules violate freedom of the press, are vague and indefinite and discriminatory.

They made the additional plea that their broadcasts about the arrest of James were based on statements made for publication of Police Commissioner Hamilton R. Atkinson.

(Under the court rules, a police officer also is liable for contempt if he discloses the prohibited information.)

WFBR said the court rules are invalid because:

1. Under Maryland law, the court has no right to punish the acts prohibited by the rules.

2. They "are on their face so vague and ambiguous a restriction on freedom of speech and the press that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at" their meaning.

3. They constitute "previous restraint on publication," which is unconstitutional.

4. They do not conform with rulings of the United State Supreme Court, which has held that in order to be in contempt published matter must constitute a "clear and present danger" to a fair trial.

5. They cannot accomplish their purpose because the court has no control over publications that originate outside of Baltimore.

Station WSID, in suburban Essex, has replied to the contempt citation against it by saying it is outside the jurisdiction of the court.

Stations WITH and WBAL and James P. Connolly, news editor of WITH, have not yet replied.

Soaped Fugitive Is Slipped Back Into Jail Cell

Catlettsburg, Ky., Nov. 12 (AP).—Police used soap to slip a man back to his cell in city jail here last night.

Chief Robert F. Adkins said Claude Baldridge, 24, got caught in a narrow passageway between an iron cage and the wall as he tried to escape—sans clothing.

Two officers heard his heavy breathing. They climbed to the top of the cage but couldn't pull or push Baldridge clear.

Finally, they made a bucket of soap suds, greased the trapped prisoner and with a mighty tug, pulled him loose.

One on the Aisle—

Lupino Tricks Up A Saloon Script

By Richard L. Coe

THANKS TO SOME nifty make-believe and a particularly socko job by Ida Lupino, the Capitol's meaty melodrama, "Roadhouse," is a more engrossing picture than you might expect.

Fundamentally the story is the familiar triangle—the hard, lost lady, the spotless, brawny hero, the despicable, unloved heel, to which is added the unwanted affections of a blond wisecracker. But Ida's lost lady is so incisive a portrait, and the roles of Cornel Wilde, Richard Widmark and Celeste Holm are so ably acted, that you really care what happens to these people in their familiar situation.

Miss Lupino's screen career is something of a paradox. Though I've missed entirely too many of her too infrequent appearances, I'm convinced she is one of the few real actresses of the screen. I've never seen her give a bad performance and the thoroughness with which she goes into every part must be apparent to all who've watched her. She seems to get inside each role and she has labored, probably at great cost to her purely boxoffice career, at finding variety in her parts.

This time the daughter of one of England's oldest theatrical families is playing the cynical songstress of a roadside saloon. Miss Lupino seems to have studied the breed intently. The gal she's playing, it's explained midway in her turmoil, grew up wanting something loftier than the job of thrush to after-dark guzzlers, again, a familiar, but logical, type.

She Sings "Aag-N"

Ida plays her with some interesting tricks. The doll's voice is a whisky baritone; the songs she sings to her own accompaniment are tearful ballads of hopeless passion. While she chants them, her cigarette burns its way into the piano above her fingers. She never quite blinks her eyes; fear and suspicion stare from her glazed orbs. It is the look you see at the joints and the race tracks. The observant Miss Lupino has caught it exactly. There's also the way she sings a song called "Again." She sings it: "Aag-N."

Wilde—who is considerably better than usual—is a boyhood friend of Widmark, and after the war the latter's inheritance builds them a going roadhouse near a conservative town. Widmark—his usual psychopathic self—wants to marry Ida, whom he's hired as a songstress at far too high a salary. But Love Dawns—the true, clean type, despite Ida's efforts to attract the male—between Partner Wilde and the tough doll. Widmark frames his partner, gets himself assigned as responsible for Wilde's parole and proceeds to torture all concerned.

"The Negulesco Touch"

The parole aspect makes the story illogical, and for all Director Negulesco's and Scripter Edward Chodorov's efforts to lay the groundwork, the yarn becomes incredible. There's a likely chase through foggy woods at the end, but not even an over-all accent on realistic setting carries the impact the film seeks.

Another problem the film raises is the wisdom of insisting on Widmark's repetition of his neurotic young man. Widmark is too potentially good an actor to be kept playing the same role just because he's been so successful in it. Miss Holm, too, is being typed, though her role in this is good if only because you don't get nearly enough of her.

Chodorov's script is praiseworthy because he's written lines that are crisp and interesting to hear, although the story line is overloaded. And the director's skill is everywhere so apparent that it's likely that soon there'll be something regularly referred to as "the Negulesco touch."

THE CAPITOL'S stage doings get off to a particularly happy start with that wonderful Kay DeWitt chanting, "I'm Just Wild About Harry," with you-know-whose face on the screen. Sam Jack Kaufman's orchestral salute to Armistice Day includes even a few bars of "The Mikado." Kay brings all this to a crashing finale with "God Bless America." With Kay getting up steam, you realize why Kate Smith is turning to non-video speech

Pat Henning, a comic whose timing is a joy to watch, has the top spot and comes off with some gags that are really funny; he's the best comedian to land on F st. in some time. Viola Layne, who's fished a few tricks from Sibyl Bowan, makes you enjoy her imitations thanks to her engaging manner. Dolinoffs and the Raya Sisters present their dance illusions and Mage and Karr open with musical comedy dance routines.

BRIEFS: "My Father's House," the film version of Meyer Levin's novel produced in Israel, will be shown tomorrow continuously from 3 p. m. and Monday from 7 p. m. in the Cafritz Auditorium of the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. . . . Sunday and Monday nights are the windup for Sidney Lust's drive-in at Beltsville, making the Airport once again the area's sole rep. of the booming auto-movie biz . . . Monday night is Pat O'Brien's variety show at Constitution Hall . . . And for the dancing crowd, a week from tonight brings Vaughn Monroe and his band into the National Guard Armory.

McCabe Advises Price Reins Only As 'Last Resort'

Philadelphia, Nov. 12 (AP).—Thomas B. McCabe, chairman of the Federal Reserve System's board of governors, today said today price controls should be reinstated "only as a last resort."

McCabe was here for a meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank.

The Philadelphia banker and industrialist declined to make any economic predictions for more than six months, but said the inflationary trend should continue for the next half year.

McCabe said a large Federal surplus is one of the best safeguards against inflation. He said he hoped Congress would take one of two steps to increase the Government's surplus. Those, he said, are either to cut expenditures or to increase income.

Absurdity In A Circle

Governor Lane's announcement of the solution of the Glen Burnie murder certainly was justified by public interest in the case. The announcement is as effective a proof as could be found of the ultimate absurdity of the gag rule on crime stories imposed by the Baltimore Supreme Bench. Baltimore newspapers played the Glen Burnie story heavily, complete with details of the accused man's confession. They were able to do this because the murder happened outside the limits of Baltimore. Had the same sort of story been printed regarding a murder that occurred within the city limits, the editors probably would have wound up with jail sentences for contempt because of the court rule prohibiting any mention of confessions. In recognizing the public concern over a solution to the murder, Governor Lane has given the best reason why the court's specious attempt to insulate juries constitutes an indefensible invasion of the people's right to know the facts.

Rent Control

Federal Housing Expediter Woods and District Rent Control Administrator Cogswell are urging an extention of rent control legislation and a strengthening of their respective enforcement powers. Such action is unquestionably needed to protect tenants in the District of Columbia and other congested centers of population from a sudden sharp rise in rentals that would inevitably follow abandonment of controls in areas where housing shortages still prevail. Premature abandonment of rent controls would not only inflict great hardship on millions of families who are now living up to or beyond their incomes; it would not in the long run benefit landlords. On the contrary, it would no doubt result in a popular clamor for reimposition of restrictive provisions that Congress would be unable to resist. As a result, the day of emancipation for owners of rental property might be indefinitely prolonged.

The greatest danger of prolonged control over rental housing, of course, is that the system will become a permanent institution. That has already happened in France where rent control dates from World War I. According to Bertrand de Jouvenel a dollar a month will now pay a wage earner's rent in Paris. Lodgings built before 1914 can be rented at controlled rates 70 per cent above 1939 prices, while rentals in buildings erected since 1914 may be lifted only 30 per cent above 1939 levels. Meantime, retail prices have increased more than 14 times. Since nobody is willing to pay the rentals that would have to be charged for new buildings—a situation that has prevailed for years—nearly 90 per cent of the Parisians are still living in houses built before the First World War, while 57 per cent occupy houses built before 1880.

While it could happen in the United States, this newspaper concludes that the request of the housing expediter for power to reestablish controls in areas where they have been abolished is more likely to hasten decontrol than otherwise. For if decontrol decisions are revocable the OHE will be less reluctant to issue them. Moreover, requests for greater power to deal with violations of rent regulations and dodges for evading the law, such as the cooperative racket that is making headway in the District, are a protection to conscientious landlords as well as tenants. Even-handed enforcement that closes the door to abuses is the first requisite of any efficient system of control over private enterprise that can count on public support.

As an emergency device to afford temporary protection to tenants in overcrowded areas, a prolongation of rent control appears to be a necessary evil, even though it tends to perpetuate the conditions that make it necessary by discouraging construction of low rent housing and indirectly boosting prices of uncontrolled articles and services. Pending removal of all rent controls, the objective should be to administer those controls equitably, so as to insure fair returns to landlords confronted by high repair and upkeep costs and heavy taxes.

Eventually rents will have to be brought more nearly in line with the general level of prices. There is no reason why those necessary adjustments cannot be gradually brought about under a system of administered rents in preparation for the day when all controls will be lifted. The people of the United States believe in a system of free enterprise based on the profit motive. Obviously free enterprise is doomed if state systems of control come to be exercised in the interest of keeping prices for any class of goods and services so low as to squeeze out private enterprise.

Legislative Graveyard

Those who, like Speaker Martin, assume that President Truman may get any measure he sponsors through the next Congress seem to have overlooked the obstructive power of the Rules Committee. Our Mr. Robert C. Albright pointed out in a news story in The Washington Post the other day that if Representatives Cox and Howard Smith vote with the Republicans to block Administration bills, as they have often done in the past, the Rules Committee would be stalemated. For that reason there is talk of enlarging the committee so as to give it a preponderance of Administration men.

No doubt the present situation could be relieved in some measure by giving the committee a larger number of Democratic members sympathetic toward President Truman's program. But that would be only a temporary expedient. The basic trouble is not so much in the committee's membership as in the overlordship that it has come to exercise over legislation. For many years it has usurped the right to pass upon the merits of legislation that has been analyzed and approved by the regular legislative committees. That abuse of privilege can be corrected only by amending the rules of the House so as to require that all bills favorably reported out from the standing committees must be sent along to the floor to be voted up or down.

In a body the size of the House, a Rules Committee is essential to give the right of way to major bills and limit the time of their consideration. But its function is to facilitate the flow of legislation—not to barricade the channel through which it must pass. If the Rules Committee is allowed any right to challenge the wisdom of bills recommended by the legislative committees, it should be confined to returning the bill promptly to the sponsoring committee for reconsideration, with no power to hold up the measure on the second request for a rule. Even this limited power of subjecting committee bills to "second thoughts" might better be exercised by a majority policy committee. A second desirable check on the Rules Committee would be a prohibition against sending bills to the floor under "gag" rules forbidding their amendment.

If these desirable reforms are to be effected in the next Congress friends of the Administration will have to move promptly. The change could be easily effected only in the draft of rules that will be submitted to the House just after its organization and the election of the Speaker. If any change should be suggested later, it would go to the graveyard of legislation—the Rules Committee—from which it could not be expected to emerge. What the Administration does in the next few weeks to mitigate this obstruction may therefore have a heavy bearing upon its success or failure in the years ahead. It is not to be supposed that Congress will in any event revert to the rubber stamp that it was in 1933-1934. But the people have a right to expect that measures recommended by the President and approved by a legislative committee will not be vetoed by a little clique whose real job is to speed the progress of important legislation.

News From Germany

In his last monthly report Gen. Lucius Clay says that the condition of workers in Berlin grows worse daily. Nearly 89,000 people are unemployed or on part-time work and many are selling their personal possessions to meet their financial obligations. All of which emphasizes the fact that the Berlin air service, despite its amazing accomplishments, is no protection against the spreading distress resulting from the Russian blockade.

From Frankfurt-on-the-Main comes another disturbing story about diet conditions in that city. Kathleen McLaughlin, in a report to the New York Times, lists the typical menus of an average family of small means: boiled potatoes, spinach, salad and butterless black bread at midday; ditto, for supper, except that carrots replace spinach. At a nearby restaurant, however, wealthy Germans presumably profiteers, may enjoy superb dinners with wine and several courses, if they are willing to pay the equivalent of $4.50 per person.

This information confirms the accounts of many Germans in the occupied areas who write their friends that since the currency reform, they see more goods in store windows, but the prices are far beyond their reach. Members of the Frankfurt family are said to congratulate themselves on the more generous portions of potatoes and bread available since the currency reform. But the tales of luxury in the midst of what is still dire want are nonetheless highly disturbing.

With unemployment and distress mounting in Berlin and "typical" workers subsisting off a monotonous diet of black bread and potatoes, it will be increasingly hard to convince the German people that we are concerned for their welfare and are making substantial sacrifices to support them. Moreover, such conditions, especially if they permit of lavish consumption by a favored few, are not conducive to inculcating a love for democratic institutions and their American expounders.

China And Greece

Senator Bridges is in favor of a call for a special session of the lame duck Congress to consider more aid for desperate China. Incidentally, though the Senator does not say this, the reported gossip is that the Republicans would like to indict President Truman for neglecting China. The suggestion would carry weight if the Eightieth Congress had not been so decisively whipped at the general elections. As it is, the Eightieth has lost the people's confidence, and the President, who made this Congress his chief target, is the hero of the hour, assured of a honeymoon of power. We fail to see how the trial balloon can come to rest in either of the quarters authorized to recall Congress.

At the same time we share the concern of Senator Bridges over the deteriorating situation in China, though our prescription would doubtless be different from his. Much, however, can be done without Congress. The East must be approached from the West, and the news from China should expedite the signature of the proposed Atlantic Pact, which would bind all the non-Asiatic powers having interests in the Far East, and promote common action there. This has long been wanting. All Asia is aflame, and the Chinese Communists, as has often been pointed out, have a decisive influence in southeastern Asia. It has always been a pity to see the old colonial proprietors in disharmony over the way to handle independence movements in the Far East which look Nationalist one minute and Communist the next. An example of cooperation in this respect is the Caribbean Commission.

Cooperative action in the Far East needs to be based on the interests of the Far East as a whole. We have particularly in mind the security of the foreign supervision of Japan pending a peace treaty. This was forgotten at the time of the aid-to-China bill. The basic requirement of rehabilitation in Japan is to clear out old and start new Far Eastern trade channels with Japan, for there is not the slightest chance of restoring the old Japanese-American commerce, which was the foundation of Japan's import and export industry. This was the feeling of many long-sighted Chinese. The policy-makers thought otherwise, and the emphasis was on China aid, not on Far Eastern aid.

But this is now water over the dam, for the aid program will now have to be completely diverted, in all probability, to bare relief for the refugees uprooted by the warring armies. As for military aid, which doubtless Senator Bridges has in mind, the 120 million dollars of it specially authorized under the Aid-for-China Act is, as to the bulk of it, in the pipeline somewhere. It would be uneconomical to let it go to the Nanking government; if we can get the government's permission, it should be delivered where our military mission in Nanking thinks it will be most useful. As for further aid to China, this argues an involvement on the Greek model, and to that we are unalterably opposed. Think of the difficulties we have encountered in Greece, where there are said to be more guerillas now than there were when we entered Greece, multiply them a thousandfold, and you would get some idea of what involvement in China would mean.

Video Home Life

Every step in progress takes its price, and television is no exception. While there is much rejoicing that the American family is again getting together around the modern successor to the fireside, the television screen, yet there is also concern over the reported decrease in reading accompanying this change. One survey shows that families with television sets read about 20 per cent less than families without them. Movies and other commercial entertainment are reported cut down on the part of television fans, with radio listening declining one half. Nor is the joy of parents having their young under their eye entirely unalloyed. The daily gang of kids filling the living room to watch ball games is no small problem, and some homes have lost all privacy because of hordes of friends and acquaintances dropping in to see the video sights. In fact, the home so recently deplored as having become a hotel now seems to be on the way to becoming a theater.

However, it must be admitted that all of this lightens man's labors. Time was when people had to provide their own entertainment—by singing around the piano, playing checkers, or performing parlor tricks. And even in recent times they have had to go to the physical effort of holding books and magazines and even at times of absorbing their contents. Worse still, they had to put out a lot of effort in conversation. The radio lessened some of their strenuous living and now "progress" via the video is furthering their vegetative life. They can simply lean back in their chairs, relax, look and listen. That is, if there isn't too big a crowd in front of the television screen.

SEED OF CASSANDRA

The ostrich thrusts his fearful head in sand.
The crocodile shuts tight his troubled eyes.
The snail retreats within his shell and lies
Snug from the things he does not understand.
But we, we mortals, see the present spanned
By past and future, watch forebodings rise,
And lift the stubborn cry, "Fools' paradise,"
To those who hide them deep in burrowed land.

For though our armor be but nakedness
And weak, uncertain words our only sword,
A heart unbowed is bulwark in distress,
A sturdy pride stout weapon shall afford.
Because man stands erect in his duress,
His giant captors shrivel powerless.

Republican Reform

The time has come for the Republican Party to retire its national managers. As a group, they have learned virtually nothing since the 1880s. They have even forgotten the little they knew about the fundamentals of practical politics.

American history shows that there are several basic rules in politics which no national party can safely violate. One of these is that the party must give no offense to any major political interest group. Yet the Republican managers showed such contempt for one such group—the Negroes—that it cost the party perhaps a million votes and upward of a dozen seats in Congress.

And they went out of their way to alienate what has undoubtedly become our strongest single political interest group—organized labor. They could not possibly have won, by this attitude, a single vote that was not already theirs. On the other hand, they might at least have won over the conservative elements of labor had they been willing to meet the unions with a compromise involving no sacrifice of principle on either side.

The Republican managers took it for granted that the Democratic victories from 1932 to 1944 were due entirely to the glittering Roosevelt personality. It did not occur to them that the voters might have had something to do with these successes. These dull and unimaginative men could not grasp the simple fact that the American people have moved a long way in their thinking since the great depression. They supposed that, with Roosevelt dead and gone, the majority would come trooping gladly back into the Republican fold.

I speak of managers, for I do not want to imply any general criticism of those who, as candidates for the principal offices, have served as temporary leaders of the party. The latter have, as a rule, been superior to the permanent managers. The Landons, Willkies, and Deweys have better understood the public mind and have been more willing to adjust their own thinking to the country's needs than have the troglodytic Spanglers, Reeces, and Hugh Scotts.

Any major party that does not keep abreast of the public's thinking is destined to decay and to eventual demise. That is the fate awaiting the Republican Party under its present management.

There are plenty of able and alert young men and women who now have no effective voice in the Republican organization, but who, given the opportunity, could quickly turn it into a useful and intelligent conservative party. And today, with President Truman a captive of that advanced radicalism which carried him to victory, the need for such a party has become more urgent than ever.

Sanctions In Israel

By voting a threat of sanctions against Israel the Security Council has placed itself in such a preposterous position as to raise fears that the august body has lost all sense of proportion.

Briefly, the situation is this: In May this year six nations of the Arab League, in direct defiance of a U. N. decision, invaded Palestine. The U. N. itself was helpless and could produce no effective instrument to halt that aggression.

However, Israel resisting successfully, the U. N. was able to persuade the Arabs to agree to two cease-fire orders. Both times, evidently, the Arabs hoped to gain a breathing space for more adequate preparation since they have persistently refused to discuss peace on the basis of recognizing the existence of Israel.

Contrary to the orders of the U. N. Truce Commission, Egypt refused to allow food convoys to reach Israeli settlements to relieve starvation, and destroyed such a convoy by force of arms. Since the U. N. itself was helpless and unable to persuade Egypt to relent or to accept Israel's bid to discuss peace, Israel decided to carve out a corridor into those settlements and to improve its position so as to cease being at the mercy of the aggressor.

Now the Security Council proposes a threat of sanctions against Israel, ordering Israel to return to his former disadvantages and to restore the aggressors to their lost advantages. By that action, the Council automatically accepts the original aggression and defiance of the Arab nations as valid.

We know what to expect from the men in the Kremlin. They lay no claims to moral scruples. But we have every right to expect more honesty from the West—and especially from our own American delegation.

Shanghai

A resident of Shanghai for near 50 years, I have seen British political courage, and British arms, save and preserve that great Asiatic outpost of democracy—save it for China as well as for the democratic world.

For nigh on 100 years, British leadership furnished a democratic city government for Shanghai, rendering possible the radiation from this greatest city of Asia, throughout the length and breadth of China, of democratic influences in the spheres of her economy, society and culture.

On VJ-Day, American military and economic power succeeded to British responsibilities in Shanghai. Will a supine American policy permit a "Pearl Harbor" at Shanghai, allowing that great Asiatic bastion of democracy to become the Asiatic bastion of communism?

The legitimate government of China will doubtless invite American arms to assist in the salvation of Shanghai. Every American voice should insist that democracy is not betrayed at Shanghai.

A Positive Program For Korea

The importance of Korea in international relations has been minimized and neglected. The Korean people have been misunderstood and disappointed. The unselfish objectives of the United States have been defeated because the traditional American democratic vigor has been lacking in Korea. Half-hearted half measures made American leadership ineffective, and Korea has been beset by confusion, intolerance and hatred. The recent revolt in south Korea was one manifestation of the unhealthy situation.

The traditional Korean admiration for and trust in America have been weakened. During the last three years, Korea has become a land of complaints. Americans blamed Korean incompetency and the Koreans blamed American ambiguity and indecision.

Not only is the country divided into two halves, but the people, who lived together for centuries, are also divided within the North and within the South under the heavy pressure of power politics. Korea and her people are geographically and racially an indivisible entity.

Koreans as well as many Americans are convinced that so long as the country remains divided, the Korean people cannot survive as a nation, economically and politically. Foreign assistance can be only temporary.

Without the industrial resources of the North, the economic condition in the South is deteriorating. Commodity prices continue to soar and inflation steadily mounts. The people are dissatisfied and restless. It is a fertile field for Communist agitation.

The only answer is to show the people a better system, and to put it into effect. Millions of farmers want to own the lands they cultivate and they will not be satisfied to remain as tenants. They want economic liberation as well as political freedom. Recognizing this situation, the United States Military Government in the early part of this year finally instituted a reform program in connection with the lands formerly owned by Japanese, but it represents only a partial reform of rural economy.

Suffering from the effects of the three years' cold war and division of their country, the people have become distrustful. They have no confidence in the existing leadership. Honest businessmen hesitate to undertake long-range constructive enterprises because they do not know what will happen tomorrow. No one feels secure, even with regard to his life, in Korea.

Through miscalculation and misinterpretation of the situation, the United States occupation failed to develop a Korean leadership which is capable of carrying out American principles. It should be remembered that as long as the occupation lasts the people will hold the United States responsible for the actions of the Korean government.

The steadily mounting internecine hatred is shaking the very foundation of the Korean nation, the effect of which will last for generations. The Korean people have no time to lose in the solution of their problem. They desire their freedom and wish to pursue happiness in their own way. To leave them in suspense is to throw them into greater civil disaster. They hope and trust that America will now take positive, practicable steps to help them out of their desperate plight.

In order to make it possible for the Korean people to bring about their own national salvation with the least possible sacrifice and tragedy, the United States should hasten to assign representatives of the highest integrity and ability to Korea so that the American policy will be explicitly understood by the Korean government and the people, and so that the economic aid will be utilized to best advantage in the reconstruction of the national economy.

The Korean problem is no less difficult than is the Berlin problem. And yet, to this time, responsible American personnel in Korea, with rare exceptions, have been mediocrities who came to the fore only because the more skilled diplomats and administrators are rewarded with more desirable posts than Korea.

The highest ability, foresight and courage are needed to handle the Korean situation for the benefit of the United States as well as Korea. Those who attempt to hold their positions by gaining the good graces of the party in power in Korea will render American policy ineffectual. If the situation is not remedied at once, not only will the cold war in Korea be lost, but hundreds of millions of American dollars will go down the drain.

Adjusting To The Job Scene

By Malvina Lindsay

Long And Short View

ONE OF THE chief fears of people of this country centers about their jobs. How long will they feel safe in the ones they have, self-confident of getting others? How should they be building their job fences against tomorrow?

Economists and occupational experts are giving these questions much study. They recognize that the big test the American system must meet before the world is to show that it can keep its citizens employed—and as far as possible in work in which they get some personal satisfaction. The latter nicety doesn't handicap dictators who can assign their serially numbered citizens to whatever work needs to be done.

For the next year at least the job prospect in this country is bright. In fact the question is: Where will employers get the one million more workers that labor statisticians predict will be needed?

The only remaining sources of supply, according to statisticians' charts, are women past 35, and veterans coming out of college. With about two million young people between 14 and 19 already in the labor force, few recruits can be expected from that field. Women between 20 and 34 are largely unavailable for jobs because of child rearing. Men, middle-aged and older are to a large degree employed. So it would seem that in the next year the middle-aged woman would have her fling in the labor market.

BUT THE catch is in finding the kind of work she wants or can do. Many women in that age group are untrained. Also there is much confusion in the job field since some industries are curtailing because of overproduction while others are expanding. All of this causes shifts of workers and calls for much flexibility from job seekers.

As to what the year after next and beyond will bring in the number and kinds of jobs, employment experts will only generalize. One definite problem they are concerned about is the overcrowding of the professions. This is being abetted by the general onrush on colleges, especially by veterans. This country soon bids fair to have as many engineers as lawyers, as many accountants and radio operators as politicians, as many fashion experts as waitresses. And the white collar cult among high school students threatens to get virtually everyone out of overalls.

Those now giving long range job guidance meet the problem: Shall they discourage the person who shows marked aptitude in an overcrowded profession or trade from going into it? Shall vocational guidance be related to the human being or the market?

EWEN CLAGUE, United States Commissioner of Labor Statistics, answered this effectively at a recent occupational conference when he advised steering young people into any broad general field where their talents seemed markedly to lie regardless of the apparent lack of jobs in it. However, they should be warned, he said, to keep their education or training flexible so that they could shift to less crowded areas of their chosen fields. Also they should realize, he pointed out, as indeed should persons in most professions in the future, that because of competition they would constantly have to study and develop to keep up with the procession.

The older person who expects to hold a job as long as possible or retire to a successful hobby also needs to do some long-range planning. For many persons require entirely different jobs at 60 from those they hold at 40. Hence retraining programs for persons 40 to 45 are needed urgently if the Nation's increasing number of older people are to be kept productive. And workers themselves need to look ahead and prepare for their second wind in the labor force.

But what of the person who does one of the many drab and routine jobs of the world in which he cannot find personal satisfaction, and which holds no fulfillment of the American dream of getting ahead? Such persons must be helped toward finding compensations outside their work, say occupational authorities. But how to do this remains one of the Nation's greatest problems.

Washington Calling

Change In Moscow's Tactics

THE EVIDENCE grows that a shift in Russian foreign policy is taking place. While in all probability it is no more than a change of strategy, it is, nevertheless, important.

Childs

Stalin's statement about peace made during the election campaign in this country, Molotov's remark that the Republican defeat was a defeat for those who wanted war, and the way in which Soviet newspapers grabbed an unfounded rumor that President Truman might go to Moscow for a meeting all add up to a change. From the faithful here and abroad, we are getting prompt echoes of the new line.

Behind the new emphasis there may be the belated realization that Soviet tactics in the recent past have contributed largely to America's preparation for a possible war. The draft and the other new defense measures hardly would have been passed by Congress if it had not been for Moscow's persistent belligerence expressed in every form of attack and denunciation.

The bosses in the Kremlin have made one crashing blunder after another if their real objective was to keep this country disarmed and indifferent. Consider what would have happened if Molotov had accepted the invitation to participate in the Marshall Plan when he came to Paris in the summer of 1947 with his 123 experts. Russia and her satellites could have sabotaged the concept from the inside.

The blockade of Berlin was intended to force the Western Allies out of that outpost with shame and humiliation before the world. That move disastrously backfired when the miracle of the airlift proved to Europe the astonishing power of the United States Air Force.

SO, "PEACE, it's wonderful," is the new line. One of the loudest echoes has come from the incredible Johannes Steel. Steel, who once ran for Congress on the American Labor Party ticket with the backing of Henry Wallace, visited the satellite countries some time ago. In his Report on World Affairs, a monthly news letter, he carried propaganda interviews with all the Cominform puppets and even—this was before the break—with Marshall Tito of Yugoslavia.

Now Steel says, "There will be no war in 1949." He goes further than that:

"Notwithstanding all warmongering, we state categorically that there will be no war between the United States and the Soviet Union for the rest of 1948 nor in 1949; and that there is not one chance in 25 that there will be war in 1950."

Steel attributes this partly to America's failure to gain support before the United Nations for the charge that the Berlin blockade represents a threat to peace. He also says that American "capitalists," seeing the inroads of communism after World War II, have become fearful of what might happen after another global conflict.

EVEN though the new emphasis should develop into a campaign for peace, it is not likely that the constant Soviet harassment in Berlin and elsewhere would cease. And certainly the Kremlin bosses will be ever ready to exploit United States' mistakes.

One of those mistakes, in my opinion, is the decision to turn Ruhr industry back to German ownership. While protests may be damped down by the harsh necessities of the moment, this goes against the view of western Europe and most opinion in England.

It is a powerful propaganda weapon handed to the Russians. Many people in this country are coming to feel increasingly that controls in Germany are being put back in the hands of those who will use them once more for aggression and war.

Genuine peace overtures from Russia should not be rebuffed. A meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers should be possible in spite of the hairsplitting that has gone on before the U. N. in Paris.

The position of the United States in Paris is not too strong. Our delegation is vunerable on several points in the Berlin dispute. The nations not directly involved seem inclined to call down a plague on both the major contenders as the wearisome wrangle goes on.

This may be the moment for a broad advance toward at least a temporary peace.

Coddling Is Major Failure Of Schools, Educators Told

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 12 (Spl.). A major shortcoming of our schools is the failure to demand enough effort and application from students, Mrs. Eugene Meyer told members of the West Virginia State Education Association here today.

Speaking on "The Modern Curriculum in American Education," Mrs. Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post, said:

"Our system of public education has contributed more to the unity, the strength and the progress of our Nation than any other of our institutions—all the more reason to recognize that our schools have not kept pace with the needs of the day."

Boys and girls are being brought up in an overprotected and coddled atmosphere, she said, adding:

"The parents insist that everybody should be promoted regardless of achievement and then they expect their children to become happy, well-adjusted citizens in a highly competitive economic world. As a result of this equalitarianism in our schools, work is beginning to be looked upon as an evil in our society which everybody should avoid as much as possible."

Criticizes "Featherbedding"

"The adventurous, pioneer spirit of America," she declared, "is being supplanted by a desire for economic security and general well-being without sufficient realization that we cannot spend more than we produce. The labor unions that have done so much to accelerate social justice, have made an unfortunate impression upon the whole country by confining their program to one of higher pay for less and less hours of work. This emphasis was necessary in the days when labor was exploited and overworked for inadequate rewards. But featherbedding and other methods of hampering production must now give way to more statesmanlike labor policies that will emphasize a fair day's work for a fair day's pay. Wendell Willkie summed up the whole problem when he said: 'None but the productive can be strong, and none but the strong can be free.'

"It is high time the public schools deliberately counteracted this debilitating trend in our national psychology," said Mrs. Meyer. "Our children must be made to feel the joy of work, of ambition, of continuous application and self-development, and that this joy can only be earned by the sweat of our brows. Our Nation is at a low moral ebb as a result of two World Wars and the panic fear of a third. Certainly one way back to moral principles, self-discipline and fortitude is to call into action from earliest childhood the resources of human energy for which the American spirit has always been noted. Our children would then realize that the moral force to be derived from strenuous individual and cooperative endeavor results in a sense of freedom, security and power that no government can confer upon them and no government can take away.

"To achieve community integration for the social orientation of the educational program, the school administrators and teachers must gain the sympathy and the active support of the local businessmen and other civic leaders. It is easy to demonstrate to industrial, bank and business executives that the quality of the school system has a direct influence upon all our moral values, upon individual growth and social stability upon the local economic structure and the maintenance of the free enterprise system."

To hold the interest of local business leaders, Mrs. Meyer suggested that they should be tied into the school system as advisers on the development of work and study programs and in the all-important matter of student guidance.

"This is the best way," she continued, "of securing scholarship support for your talented boys and girls who can not afford to go to college."

Talented children, she emphasized, should receive more attention from school teachers and from community leaders. Our educational methods, like our welfare and health programs, are overconcentrated upon the physically handicapped, the mentally retarded and the average child. "Of course we must help the weak," she said, "but we must put at least part of our endeavor upon helping the strong if our Nation is ever going to develop its fullest human, civic, and ethicopolitical capacities. If we are not going to turn our Nation into a gigantic welfare state in which the politicians assume the role of paternalistic guardians, our liberty must be the means of creating and promoting the superior individual."

Pleads For Federal Aid

Mrs. Meyer concluded her speech with a plea for Federal aid to education in order that our system of education may be equalized throughout the country and every child may have an equal opportunity for self-development.

"The child, however impoverished his environment may be," she said, "must be made to feel that the public school is the open door to equal economic and social opportunity; that it is not only the key to a rich and fruitful life but the means by which our Nation preserves, buttresses and expands the possibilities of individual freedom.

"Then the overworked word democracy will again become a vital reality for our children; they will become more discerning of propaganda that tries to break down their faith in our free enterprise system; they will understand the social and biological importance of the family; their love and devotion to democracy will find outlets for community service; and they will feel that all minority groups must share alike in the responsibilities and privileges of the American way of life."

Race Is Denied Basis of School Pay Inequality

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 12 (Spl.). The Chesterfield County (Va.) School Board faced with a Federal District Court injunction to wipe out salary discrimination against Negro teachers, contended here today that race or color is not the question involved.

The board, in arguing its case before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, maintained the tenth amendment to the Constitution provides for discrimination in such matters as teachers' salaries.

"This right of the defendants (the board) to discriminate on the ground of age, sex, training, aptitude, personality and so forth, is a constitutional right with which no department of the central government can properly interfere."

The school board, represented today by Ralph T. Catterall, seeks to reverse a decision handed down July 29 by Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson of Richmond. It was awarded in favor of three Chesterfield Negro teachers as plaintiffs.

Attorneys Martin A. Martin and Oliver W. Hill, the latter a member of the Richmond City Council, presented arguments for plaintiffs today.

Their original complaint said that plaintiffs "have satisfied the requirements . . . and exercise the same duties" as white teachers in Chesterfield. Yet, it said, "virtually all white teachers in Chesterfield County who hold similar certificates with equal and less experience receive salaries much larger than the salaries paid respective plaintiffs."

Judge Hutcheson charged Superintendent E. S. H. Greene, defendant with the school board, with violating the Constitution. He issued a permanent injunction against the board and Greene, restraining them from paying Negro teachers smaller salaries than whites because of race and color.

Hearing today's arguments were Senior Circuit Judge John J. Parker and Circuit Judges Morris A. Soper and Armistead M. Doble. No time was indicated as to when an opinion would be announced.

Appellees in the case are Arthur M. Freeman, Dorothy T. Reese and Ruby M. De Witt. All three teachers have bachelors' degrees.

15 Ex-Guards Of Nazi Camp Are Hanged

Munich, Germany, Nov. 12 (AP). Fifteen former guards at the Mauthausen concentration camp were hanged at Landsberg prison today. An American war crimes court had convicted them of slaying more than 4600 wartime inmates in the camp, including 47 American and British airmen.

The executions raised to 58 the number of convicted German war criminals hanged at Landsberg in the past month. Still facing execution are 81 of an original list of 139.

The United States Army has refused to halt the executions despite protests from German church leaders. A few men have been reprieved because the judge advocate general certified a stay was warranted by new evidence.

Those sent to the gallows this morning were accused of exterminating inmates by shooting, hanging, beating, trampling, drowning, suffocation and injections. Thirteen were SS (storm troop) men. Two were inmates who turned on their fellow prisoners.

One of those hanged was SS Corpl. Josef Kisch, 36. An army statement dealing with his case said: "In September, 1944, Kisch participated in the killing of 47 English and American parachutists by beating and driving them to the stone quarry where a guard shot them.

"In February, 1945, he participated in beating to death with an iron bar 500 inmates who had just arrived.

"He severely beat other inmates, including an American flier, and in one instance, beat an inmate to the ground and stood on him, then pushed a stick down his throat and turned it around, thus killing the inmate."

Investigators To Hunt for Miss Bentley

William W. Remington's attorneys yesterday obtained Federal Court authority to use private investigators to find Elizabeth T. Bentley.

The attorneys want to see that she gets a copy of Remington's suit against her for defamation of character based on her calling him a Communist during a television broadcast.

The order was issued in New York, giving Attorney Richard G. Green authority to serve the copy on her, and the action was announced in Washington by Attorney Joseph L. Rauh, jr. They represent Remington. Until Miss Bentley gets the copy of the suit, the action against her cannot proceed, said Rauh.

Remington is the suspended Commerce Department official described by Miss Bentley in congressional hearings as one of the officials who gave her confidential war production information. She also named him as a Communist and repeated the charge on the radio after being told she had no immunity there from a suit. Miss Bentley acknowledged herself as a former member of a war-time Communist espionage ring.

Remington, in the hearings, testified he had talked to Miss Bentley, thinking her a reporter, but said he gave her no secret information. He denied any Communist affiliation, both in the hearings, and in his suit.

Layoffs Rise, Inventories Set Record

By The Associated Press

Layoffs in northeastern industry mounted yesterday as more manufacturing plants announced employment cutbacks.

In White Plains, N. Y., officials of the General Electric Co. said production would be cut 50 per cent November 22 because sales have been lagging behind output. There was no estimate of the number of workers to be affected in the plant, which manufactures kitchen disposal units.

The Indian Motorcycle Co. at Springfield, Mass., laid off 250 of its 1050 employes as of today (Friday), thus reducing its force to one shift.

200 Laid Off in Holyoke, Mass.

In Holyoke, Mass., it was estimated 20 per cent of the 1000 workers at the Worthington Pump and Machinery Corp., would be idled by a layoff.

The Globe plant of the American Woolen Co., at Utica, N. Y., announced a 10 per cent reduction of its force of 900. The factory makes suit fabrics.

And at Syracuse, N. Y., the L. C. Smith and Corona Typewriter Co., ordered a reduction of the work week from five to four days for some 2000 employes. Officials gave lessened demand for office typewriters as the reason and said they hoped the cutback would be only temporary.

Inventories Above Seasonal

Meanwhile in Washington, the Commerce Department reported that business inventories reached a record high of $53,300,000,000 at the end of September.

This was a climb of about 800 million dollars during the month. Retail inventories accounted for 600 million dollars of the increase, while manufacturing and wholesale inventories went up by 60 million dollars and 135 million dollars, respectively.

The department said more-than-seasonal inventory gains were shown in all major retail lines except the auto sales field.

At the end of September, the department said, the book value of stocks of goods on hand stood at: manufacturing $30,460,000,000; wholesale $8,245,000,000; retail $14,595,000,000.

Fraternity Suspends Chapter For Pledging Negro Student

Amherst, Mass., Nov. 12 (U.P.)—The national officers of Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity today suspended indefinitely the Amherst College Chapter because of its decision to take in a Negro student, on grounds of "unfraternal conduct."

The Amherst Chapter interpreted the suspension as meaning it can engage in no activities relating to national fraternity functions, such as pledging and initiation.

Despite this, the members plan to initiate the Negro student, Thomas W. Gibbs of Evanston, Ill., and 15 other sophomore pledges, November 23. A college spokesman said they probably would improvise an initiation ritual—not similar to the Phi Kappa Psi ceremonies—and the group would become a local fraternity.

At a national convention in Estes Park, Colo., last summer the executive council ordered the Amherst chapter to withdraw its pledge of Gibbs. At the time it complied, but last Saturday it repledged him.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 12 (U.P.). The indefinite suspension of the Amherst College chapter of Phi Kappa Psi for pledging a Negro student will be placed before the fraternity's executive council late this month, national president Howard L. Hamilton said today.

Eastern Dock Strike Called

nomic Cooperation Administration, said Marshall Plan shipments would be hampered by the freight embargo to the same extent as other transatlantic cargo.

Ryan did not give the total figure of the longshoremen's vote, but said it was "almost unanimous."

The tentative wage agreement called for an increase in day shift, straight-time pay from $1.75 to $1.85 an hour, and in the night and weekend overtime rate from $2.62½ to $2.77½.

The union originally asked for a 50-cent hourly boost.

The pact was negotiated earlier this week by union leaders. On Wednesday, however, dissident dock workers in the New York port area struck in protest of the agreement. The walkout spread quickly to other ports on the East Coast, including Boston and Philadelphia.

Ryan said ships arriving in Army bases in all ports "will be worked." The strikers have been servicing these ships since the stoppage began here.

Ryan's announcement came as delegates of the strikers awaited a message from President Truman, presumably on the strike situation.

Ryan said the message was to be read later to the delegates. He said he did not know its contents but that it was written before Mr. Truman left for Florida. It was prepared and given to Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation Service, for delivery to the stevedores if negotiations collapsed, he added.

Ryan also said the mediation service told him Monday it had a plan of its own for settlement, which it wanted to apply if talks fell through.

Mayor William O'Dwyer prepared to cut short a California vacation and return.

Meanwhile, the waterfront strike took on an international complexion.

The Cunard White Star Line, owner of the British liners Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mary and others, notified shippers in Liverpool, England, tonight that no more cargoes for the United States could be accepted until the strike here was settled.

The Nova Scotian port of Halifax, meantime prepared for an unprecedented flow of shipping because of the strike, which has diverted Atlantic liners there.

The liners Mauretania and Veendam already are there. The Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary will dock there November 22 and November 29, respectively, if the strike continues. Passengers are being brought to New York by train.

Chrysler Strike Over; Work Orders Go Out

Detroit, Nov. 12 (AP).—A production dispute that had idled 13,500 workers in four Detroit area plants of Chrysler Corp. was settled late today and back-to-work orders went out to the men.

'Dead End Kid' Held

Hollywood, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Former "Dead End Kid" Huntz Hall, 28, was ordered held today for superior court trial on a charge of possessing marihuana.

Phone Union Accepts Wage Boost Offer

Washington area telephone plant, accounting and commercial workers have voted to accept a Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. offer to boost wages about $4.11 weekly.

Glenn Watts, president of Division 36, Communications Workers of America (Ind.), announced yesterday that union members voted 1041 to 507 in favor of accepting the wage increase. Union leaders had accepted the proposal tentatively a week ago after previously rejecting it.

The agreement, covering some 3500 workers, will be retroactive to last Sunday. A spokesman for operators, meantime, reiterated their refusal to accept the company's last offer.

3 More Rail Unions Accept 10-Cent Raise

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—Three railroad unions whose strike threat last May was blocked by a last-minute Federal court injunction reached a wage settlement with the railroads today.

They accepted a 10-cent hourly wage boost, retroactive to October 16.

The settlement, covering 250,000 engineers, firemen and switchmen, completed the third-round wage increases for five unions whose 350,000 members operate the Nation's trains.

D. P. Loomis, chairman of the Western Railoads wage committee, estimated the settlement would add 40 million dollars a year to railroad operating costs. A similar 10-cent-hourly settlement reached October 4 with the conductors and trainmen will add another $55,665,000 to costs, he added.

Today's agreement marked the first time the carriers and their engineers and firemen reached a national wage accord across the bargaining table, without recourse to mediation, arbitration or fact finding, Loomis said.

Still unsettled, however, are the wage and working conditions demands of some one million members of 16 nonoperating unions whose members are telegraphers, yardmen, and others not actually engaged in operating the trains. A presidential fact-finding board is hearing this dispute.

Coast Negotiations Gather Momentum

San Francisco, Nov. 12 (AP).—Negotiations for settlement of the protracted West Coast maritime strike gathered momentum today.

CIO longshoremen and the Waterfront Employers' Association held two meetings. They agreed to speed up efforts at settlement by naming a subcommittee to work on the Murray-Roth peace plan. This plan provides Almon E. Roth's San Francisco Employers Council and Philip Murray's national CIO will play a part in averting future maritime tieups.

Maryland's Henry Wallace vote in the November 2 elections was more than enough to swing the Free State into the Republican column, the official election returns showed yesterday.

Barrett Launches Book Sale Probe

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett yesterday ordered an investigation of the sale of a recently published medical book by Dr. Benjamin Karpman, chief psychotherapist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Ulrey

The action followed a demand by Lieut. Col. Walter O. Ulrey of the Volunteers of America that the book, "The Alcoholic Woman," be suppressed."

Ulrey said the book was "currently on Washington newsstands," and described it as "the filthiest, most obscene, pornographic, libidinous and licentious piece of trash that ever polluted the reading public."

"Someone immediately should prohibit and confiscate this issue," Ulrey said.

Lieut. Harry Blackman of the Police Department's special investigation squad and Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken of the Women's Bureau were ordered to investigate sale of the book by Chief Barrett and report back to him.

"The Alcoholic Woman," subtitled "Case Studies in the Psychodynamics of Alcoholism," is a 241-page book selling for $3.75. It gives the case histories of three women, including their sexual experiences and dreams, and analyzes their significance. The blunt language used by the women in describing their experiences has been retained.

Jean Karr, wholesale book jobber at 117 D st. nw., handling local distribution of the book, said he was "100 per cent sure the book is not being offered for sale on newsstands," and that "as far as Washington is concerned, it will not reach any but legitimate outlets."

Legitimate outlets include bookshops, drugstores and other businesses regularly selling books, he said.

Ulrey said he had not read the book all the way through, "just the highlights," after patients "in our life adjustment bureau had mentioned it. He said the bureau's patients are maladjusted persons "who want to get their problems straightened out."

"The Alcoholic Woman" is published by the Washington Institute of Medicine, 1720 M st. nw., a nonprofit organization established in 1931. It publishes 12 medical journals, and several years ago began publishing medical works. Its publications have in international circulation.

Henry J. Klaunberg, president of the institute, said that before Dr. Karpman's book was printed, it had been circulated among a number of professional authorities and following publication a few weeks ago, it had received high praise from clergymen, doctors and lawyers.

Klaunberg said he did not feel that the Volunteers of America were very well qualified to criticize the book in the face of the praise it had received, "but if something comes up that can be corrected I am more than willing to do it.

He said a first edition of 5000 copies had been printed, and a second printing of 5000 copies had been made but not yet distributed, adding that this printing was not excessive since "there are more than 8000 psychiatrists, besides general practitioners. We could have had a huge edition and made a nice profit," he said.

Colonel Ulrey, who was unable to name any newsstands where the book is on sale, said "it is being pushed in a very quiet manner. Obviously it is going to get into the hands of people who shouldn't read it.

"The jacket is very attractive," he said, "like a novel."

Klaunberg said he didn't like the jacket either. "It was done by an outside firm supposed to handle public relations," he said, "and got a little out of hand." He added that his organization is no longer employing the firm.

An artistic gray and white picture on the dust jacket shows two loops of pearls photographed against a cloth background. The pearls are an allusion to a dream described in the book.

The front flap of the jacket begins with references to Hollywood, "The Lost Weekend" and "Smash-Up."

Elsewhere on the jacket there are indorsements by Robert H. Gault, editor, Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, Northwestern University school of law, and Dr. Hervey Cleckley of the University of Georgia school of medicine, and a warning that the book should not fall into the hands of immature persons.

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, also received a telegram from Colonel Ulrey protesting sale of "The Alcoholic Woman." Dr. Reissig said he had not seen the book but "will look into it."

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths and to whom the book is dedicated, said "of course it is not a pornographic book. It is a perfectly serious study. I am sorry if some of the very delicately minded people of the city are disturbed by it."

The first case described in the book is that of a 35-year-old woman, "the major part of whose life has been divided between chronic alcoholism and sexual promiscuity," and who was for 11 years the mistress of a retired military officer, who was himself an incurable alcoholic.

Second Case Described

The second case is that of a 29-year-old married woman, "the victim of a poor heredity and an even poorer environment," with a record of arrests for robbery, alcoholism and disorderly conduct. The patient's seduction at the age of 14 years by a 30-year-old man, her dissatisfaction with her husband and attempts at suicide are described.

The third case is that of a 26-year-old woman "whose life from the time she was 15 has been pretty evenly divided between alcohol and sexual promiscuity." Her aversion to the male sex, sense of sin and other factors are discussed and analyzed.

Referring to the types of alcoholics discussed in these case studies, Dr. Karpman says there is "a vicious cycle: depression—alcohol; greater depression—more alcohol, etc., etc. There is obviously no way to break up the vicious cycle except by getting at the basic causation and to resolve the depression by means other than alcohol. It is here that psychotherapy may in some cases be effective because it attempts to go to the basic roots of the problem."

Discussing his book over the telephone, Dr. Karpman described alcoholism as a great social problem and said that "while some work has been done on alcoholism and men, practically nothing has been done on alcoholism and women, and I thought by doing this book I could help the poor unfortunates."

Robbers Take Visitor's $344

Being robbed of $340 in travelers' checks, $4 cash and two suitcases of clothes will not stop Robert Hauptmann, 18, of Skagway, Alaska, from completing a tour of Washington.

The husky, 6-foot, red-headed son of a lumber camp foreman was taken for a ride by three smooth-talking strangers on his arrival at the Greyhound bus station Thursday after a 4000-mile trip via Fairbanks and Seattle. They put his two bags in their car, showed him some points of interest and drove three miles below Alexandria en route to Mount Vernon, where they dumped, beat and robbed him, then drove off.

Hauptmann hitch-hiked back to Washington, walked the streets all night and finally told his story to the Travelers Aid and Park Police. He was driven around for hours in a vain search for the thieves. Last night he was put up at the Central YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., awaiting a reply from a wire home. A stop-payment order was placed on the travelers' checks.

Pending recovery of their value, the boy expects to receive more money from home today.

German Families Send Thanks To Bible Classes for Gifts

"A thousand, thousand thanks to you and all contributors for your dear package which arrived August 10. There was much joy in my family."

With these words the Pfingsten family of Hannover, Germany, sent its thanks for food and clothing to members of the Mariner's Club of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, 201 4th st. se.

The Pfingsten family is one of four families adopted by four Bible classes at the church, of which the Rev. James Curtis Fahl is pastor.

Project Began in Spring

The project began last spring when the Rev. Ralph K. Merker, stated clerk of the Presbytery of Washington City, learned the name of a pastor in Hannover from a former member of his congregation in Erie, Pa., who was in Germany.

Mrs. Fahl, who writes and reads German fluently, wrote the wife of the pastor, Frau Renate Stier, for the names of four families the church might aid. Though the pastor and his family refused help, Frau Stier sent the names of four worthy families.

One of the men is studying to become a minister, another is a deacon in the Gethsemane parish of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Hannover of which Herr Stier is pastor.

Since receiving the names of the families, each of the classes has sent clothing and CARE food packages. Recently special packages, with heavy winter clothing and things for the holiday season, were sent.

Because one family wrote last August that it planned to save a can of milk for Christmas, the most recent packages have included special tins of food, Mr. Fahl said.

Shoes, he said, are one of the most desperate needs of the Hannover families, and the children of one are unable to go to school because they have none.

Letters Express Thanks

In their letters the German families have expressed their thanks to their Washington friends. The Bischof family wrote the Philathea class:

"Our little Babs, who is now 6 years old, just jumped for joy and said to her mother, 'Oh, mother, how happy I am about nice package from the good people.' So you see that the joy over the announced package is great with young and old."

Family Ahrens wrote the Friendship class about the loud rejoicing in their home when the package of shoes and clothing arrived.

In addition to the four adopted families, Metropolitan is a regular contributor to the drives of Church World Service for world relief, Mr. Fahl said.

Vesper Service To Open YWCA Prayer Week

Vesper services at the National Cathedral at 4 p. m. Sunday will mark the opening of the Young Women's Christian Association's annual week of prayer and world fellowship.

At the same hour, similar services will be held in more than 400 other communities in the country.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will preach at the cathedral service. Featured artist will be Licia Albanese, Metrooplitan Opera Company lyric soprano, who will sing the Bach-Gonoud "Ave Maria."

Embassy Girls in Procession

The Howard University Choir, under the direction of Dean Warner Lawson; the Cathedral Choir, directed by Paul Callaway; and the Y.W.C.A. Glee Club also will take part.

Miss Barbara Hall of Bucknell University, representing the Y.W.C.A. movement, will read the collects.

A colorful procession of girls from Washington embassies in native dress will represent 20 of the 69 countries in which the Y.W.C.A. is organized. In addition, 51 young women in navy and white "Y" uniforms will represent the 48 States and three Territories of this country.

Mrs. Dun to Entertain

Offerings from the States and the congregational offering will be used for the "Y" world fellowship movement.

Mrs. Arthur Forrest Anderson of New York, president of the National Board of Y.W.C.A., and Mrs. J. Birdsall Calkins of Arlington, Va., vice president of the world organization, will attend the service.

Immediately after the service Mrs. Angus Dun will entertain representatives of the national board, officers of the Washington "Y" and participants in the program at a tea in her home.

Drs. Hastings, Cranford Will Exchange Pulpits

Ministers of two denominations which are considering union will exchange pulpits on Sunday.

Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., will preach at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, at 10:50 a. m. Dr. Cranford, who will speak on "When Foundations Are Threatened," will be introduced to the congregation by the Rev. Myron W. Chrisman, associate minister.

Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of the National City Church, will speak at services at 9 and 11:15 a. m. at Calvary Baptist. His sermon-topic is "In the Power of the Spirit."

About one hundred ministers in churches of the Baptists and Disciples of Christ throughout the Nation will exchange pulpits this week in an effort to get to know each other better and stress the many beliefs the denominations have in common, Dr. Hastings said.

Church to Present Religious Sound Film

"The Templed Hills," a sound picture worship service, will be shown at 8 p. m. Sunday at Trinity Methodist Church, Seward Square and 5th st. se. At the 11 a. m. service at the church Dr. Daniel W. Justice will speak on "I Believe in the Church."

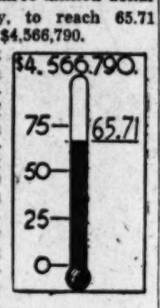
Chest Gifts Top 3 Million Fund Total

The Community Chest campaign crept over the three million dollar mark yesterday, to reach 65.71 per cent of its $4,566,790.



Nine unit chairmen brought in additional gifts of $187,432.64 at a report luncheon—far short of the $500,000 in new gifts asked by Chairman Chauncey G. Parker at report luncheon last Tuesday.

Chest volunteers, who met in the Washington Hotel, heard representatives of 10 Red Feather agencies, ranging from an 8-year-old Christ Child Farm convalescent to an 80-year-old resident at the Hebrew Home for the Aged, read the reports.

Leader yesetrday, as it has been since early in the drive, was the Government Unit, with 85.4 per cent of its $1,524,557 quota filled.

Parker called the record "fine—but not good enough," pointing out that 30,000 Government workers have not given yet to the Red Feather drive.

Labeled "our most urgent problem" by the Red Feather chairman, the Chest's Big Business Unit reported 60.68 per cent of its $1,785,271 quota filled, and the Small Business Unit reported only 34.84 per cent of its $364,390 goal pledged—lowest record held by any major campaign unit.

Only 54,322 gifts have been received from more than 154,000 big business employes, Parker noted, and just 3911 contributions have been received from a total of 86,000 small business employes.

Large corporations "almost without exception have responded adequately in their firm gifts," Parker said, but "thousands of Business II firms have declined to give."

Americans Live 25 Years Longer Now

Boston, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—The American Public Health Association took stock today of a century of progress in medicine.

Meeting here just 100 years after the first public health law was passed, the association learned that organized health protection has added 25 years to the life of Americans

Typhoid fever has been virtually wiped out, infant mortality was cut 82 per cent and deaths for diphtheria, measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough and diarrhea practically eliminated.

Louis I. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., said the tuberculosis death rate, once 450 per 100,000 of population, has been cut o less than 40, a reduction of 90 per cent.

"In 1850, the expectation of life of a male at birth was 38.3 years in Massachusetts; in 1940, the expectation was 63.3 years. For white females, the figure in 1850 was 40.5; in 1940 it was 67.6."

"It is not an exaggeration," Dublin said, 'to claim that the current prosperity and leadership of the United States in world affairs flows in good part from the achievements of the last century in the field of medicine and its auxiliary health services."

Youth Admits Beating Mother's Suitor Fatally

Washington, Pa., Nov. 12 (U.P.).—A slim, 17-year-old youth admitted today to beating fatally a 200-pound policeman he accused of breaking up his home life by his attentions to his attractive mother.

The youth, Veleran Neth, of nearby Coal Center, Pa., told State police he beat up Lee J. Beam, 51, Speers Borough policeman, in the driveway of a Speers service station and left him lying unconscious. The policeman died shortly after the fight.

Family Losing Spot On 50-Yard Line

By The Associated Press

The Dahl family, lock, stock and barrel, is being eased off the 50-yard line of the University of Maryland's new stadium, now under construction at College Park.

The cottage of Donald Dahl is being moved back some 200 yards—beyond where the stadium walls will rise. As it stood, the house would have dominated the midfield stripe.

Hoyas Prove Easy for Villanova, Lose, 36 to 7

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

MARYLAND VS. NORTH CAROLINA commands the local interest today, and such interest in a college football game has never before been manifest here, but across the Nation there are other intriguing engagements.

The Notre Dame-Michigan frenzy for top ranking nationally continues, with Northwestern and Indiana their newest foils. At South Bend, the objective of the Irish will be to lick Northwestern by more than the 28-0 score by which Michigan beat the Wildcats four Saturdays ago. Meanwhile, Michigan is intent on trampling Indiana by better than 42-6, the margin of Notre Dame's victory last week.

POVICH

Beating a team by a bigger score than the other guys did is a sop to the vanity, and that's about all. Long ago, comparative scores were adjudged as meaningless, and Notre Dame has a powerful alibi against the day when Michigan attempts to claim superiority on that basis. In beating Navy 41-6, Iowa 27-12 and Indiana 42-6, the Irish didn't deign to throw a forward pass in the last half of any of those games.

THE SIGNIFICANT game of the day for its effect on Eastern ranking is, of course, the Army-Penn affair in Franklin Field. The unbeaten West Pointers are somewhat of a mystery power, with the suspicion being that they haven't licked anybody of consequence yet despite the fact Cornell was one of their victims. If they can beat Penn, as they probably will, then the Cadets will qualify as one of the ranking powerhouses nationally.

Army needs opposition like Penn to evaluate properly not only its rating among the top teams, but for an appraisal of its good backs, Gil Stephenson and Bobby Stuart. That pair has been running free against all opponents thus far but they have not encountered as big or as good a line as Penn's. The Quakers lack Army's good backs, but they will have the best football player on the field in Charley Bednarik, their tremendous center.

Penn State has already beaten Penn and a defeat for Army today will not only collapse the Cadets' bid for national honors but leave them running far behind Penn State in the East. In another respect, Penn-Army will be the top game of the day. No other contest will match the crowd of 80,000 in Franklin Field.

NAVY FARES FORTH to New York for what could be the peak event of their schedule to date—the game with Columbia that holds prospects of developing the Middies' first victory of the year. They'll be meeting a four-times beaten Columbia team, but that is no guarantee of a Navy victory, either. They'll also be meeting up with two of the most accomplished backs in the country in Columbia's Lou Kusserow, fullback, and Gene Rossides, passing ace.

There were signs last week of a Navy renaissance against Michigan despite their ultimate 35-0 beating and failure to penetrate within Michigan's 38-yard line. Navy was a sharp team in the first half and left the field trailing only 14-0, before being worn down by the boundless Michigan power.

Navy's prospects are getting a lift from the return to the team of Fullback Bill Hawkins after more than a month's absence. Hawkins was a tremendous asset on defense against Michigan but his smashes at the line didn't contain their usual power. With an additional week's training, Hawkins may be ready to perform in his immense way, which means that the Middies' attack will be at its best.

THE BIGGEST CROWD in the history of college football in Washington may be scenting a Maryland victory over North Carolina, but a cold look at the personnel of the two teams apparently justifies the 13-point favoritism of Carolina. The Terrapins have nothing to match the twin forces of Charley Justice and Hosea Rodgers in the Tar Heels' backfield.

That Maryland line, a good one, will be meeting its stiffest test of the year, and may indeed be the best line on the field, but Jim Tatum's backs, Harry Bonk, Jimmy Larue and Hub Werner, will need the best day of their lives to out-perform Justice and Rodgers. The fellow on whom Maryland's hopes are riding chiefly is Quarterback Vic Turyn, the clever ball-handler who runs and passes and who could be the medium of an upset.

Anyway, it's wonderful—35,000 at a college football game in Washington where college football supposedly was a basket case after the invasion of the Redskins.

Terps, N. C. Tangle Today Before 35,000

Tar Heels Favored by 2 Touchdowns

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Undefeated North Carolina meets undaunted Maryland today in Washington's biggest collegiate football game of this or any other year.

A near-capacity crowd of 35,000 will jam Griffith Stadium for the 2 p. m. kickoff which finds the vaunted Tar Heels two-touchdown favorites to continue their march to New Orleans and the Sugar Bowl.

Unbeaten, but tied once in 14 games, Coach Carl Snavely's powerhouse will be cheered on by at least 6000 Carolinians in the record local college crowd.

Almost 32,000 tickets had been disposed of at the close of business last night with the remaining seats to go on sale at the ball park at 9 a. m. today.

Practically everyone except the weatherman, who happens to be a Carolina graduate, has joined in to try to make the day a banner affair. "The prospects are for light rains," predicted M. N. Hunter, who saw his alma mater dump Maryland, 19-0, in the rain here last year.

The Tar Heels held their final practice in Chapel Hill yesterday morning and came here by plane at 4 p. m. They were hustled off to their Hamilton Hotel quarters where hundreds of Tar Heel followers were whooping it up until the early hours of the morning.

Terps Take it Easy

Maryland didn't even limber up. The Terps attended a lengthy blackboard session in the afternoon, took in a movie and then returned to Ritchie Coliseum where they were quartered for the night.

Carolina's rating as a two-touchdown favorite is entirely Justified, if you'll pardon the pun. In its brilliant tailback, 167-pound Charlie Justice, Carolina has one of the finest performers in the country.

Justice has run, passed and punted the Tar Heels to its successes for three seasons and is expected to lead them to another victory today.

Weiner Tough, Too

Maryland feels it can clamp down on the thrusts of Fullback Hosea Rodgers and the reverses of Wingback Johnny Clements, but stopping Justice is another matter. But they'll be trying.

Another integral part of the Tar Heel offense, End Art Weiner, also poses a serious threat to the Terp defenses. Weiner, a 6-foot-4-inch junior, has been called the finest pass receiver in the Southern Conference. He has caught four touchdown passes already. In addition, he's gained 90 yards in eight trips with the ball on end-around plays.

Defensively, Carolina is the Nation's second best. The defensive team has yielded only 44.9 yards per game on the ground.

Terps Aren't Overawed

Despite all this, the Terrapins aren't overawed. They've rolled up major league yardage against chiefly minor league foes, but believe they're capable of whizzing by the Tar Heel defenses, too.

Quarterback Vic Turyn is the key man of their high-geared offense which features tricky hand-

Terps, Tar Heels on CBS Football Roundup

The Maryland-North Carolina game will play a big part in the Columbia Broadcasting System's roundup broadcast today. The new method, now in its second week, will attempt to bring listeners a report of 23 to 27 of today's big games.

The Griffith Stadium clash will be one of the three games picked up directly from the stadium. The others are Northwestern-Notre Dame and Minnesota-Iowa. Red Barber will broadcast reports of the other games from New York.

HE COMES DOWN—Bob Reilly, Wilson ball carrier, is about to be brought down after taking a lateral pass from Nick DeLodovico in yesterday's interhigh football game at Wilson. Two Central men, Rudy Jones (27) and Francis Gleason (35), move in on the play, while Jimmy Pantos, Central, almost trips up the runner. Central won, 34-6

Central Socks Wilson By 34 to 6

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The undefeated Central Vikings breezed a game nearer the Interhigh football championship yesterday with a 34-6 victory over Woodrow Wilson at Wilson Stadium.

Halfback Jack Wert rallied an alert defense against a desperate Wilson air attack, and his three interceptions and two touchdowns highlighted the Vikings' triumph.

To complete its league slate with a perfect record, Central needs only to whip thrice-beaten Western in their regular season finale next Friday.

Wilson's loss clinched second place for the idle Anacostia Indians.

Wilson's air attack, sprung by Halfback Garry Quinn, kept the Tigers in the game for only a quarter and a half when it put Central behind, 6-0.

After that single Tiger show of strength, the Vikings were all over the field, blocking a kick and turning it into a touchdown, intercepting seven passes, and converting three of them scores.

A blocked kick by Wilson's Don Meany put Wilson in scoring position near the end of the first quarter. The Tigers finally went over in the second when a fancy Quinn to Nick DeLodovico to Bob Rielly lateral and pass covered the last 14 yards.

Central quickly rebounded, driving 52 yards on Jimmy Pantos' running and passing to the Wilson 10. Wert then hit the line three times to score from the 6. Nick Chaconas missed his only extra point, and it was 6-6.

Pantos Scores Twice

Tackle Fotis Karousatos blocked a Wilson punt, and Bill Dunker recovered on the Tiger 20 to set up what amounted to Central's winning touchdown. A 9-yard slant by Pantos scored.

Wert intercepted Quinn passes in the third and fourth quarter to set up the next two Viking touchdowns. He scored the first on a 5-yard off-tackle run. Pantos, taking a lateral from John Roman, scored the other on a 15-yard sprint around left end.

Roy Cuzzins, just promoted from the junior varsity, tallied the last Central score, covering 22 yards on four line smashes. That TD was set up on a Pat McDougal interception and 40-yard runback.

Pasquariello Paces 'Cats With Three Touchdowns

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Nov. 12.—A burly 225-pound fullback, Ralph Pasquariello, chose tonight to repeat his performance in Villanova's opening game and the result was a 36-7 rout of Georgetown before 16,500 at Shibe Park.

The boys in the know who made the Hoyas a 14-point underdog obviously didn't know Pasquariello was going to grind out 180 yards in 21 attempts.

He made three touchdowns on respective runs of 7, 3 and 50 yards. Pasquariello also set up that fourth touchdown but was snubbed after moving to the 1 and Halfback John Geppi carried it over from there.

Villanova also picked up two points on a safety in the second period and made every quarter a scoring one when Fullback Tom Calvin tossed a 21-yard touchdown pass to End Ed Berrang.

Hoyas Net 31 Yards Rushing

The hapless Hoyas gained only one first down by rushing, netting a mere 31 yards. However, with the score 36-0 against them, they did muster enough drive to move 67 yards for their lone score in the last seven minutes.

Things were so tough for Georgetown that Elmer Rabo, primarily a defensive back, had to take them goalward. Elmer helped eat up the yardage with passes to Bill Mitchell and Soph Billy Rose, then took a pass from Tony Beyer for a 4-yard advance to Villanova's 14.

Then Rabo completed his work with an 11-yard touchdown pass that Rose carried over. Dick Haesler added the point but all it did was avert a shutout for Georgetown.

Pasquariello has been strangely silent since his brilliant role in Villanova's 34-14 walloping of Texas A. and M. at that time he was hailed as another Bronko Nagurski. Unhappily for Georgetown, he gave another Nagurski impersonation this crisp evening.

The Hoyas stopped Villanova's first surge toward their goal and it took 13 minutes and 35 seconds of the first period before Pasquariello registered his first score from the 7.

But the gates opened in the second period and after Bobby Polidor went 19 yards to the Georgetown 3, Pasquariello again received his cue.

Too Much Pasquariello

Villanova varied its attack when Dick Barba fumbled in the end zone trying to run from his three. Guard Paul Wintermeyer recovered for the Hoyas in the end zone to stave off four more Villanova points.

Pasquariello did his best to keep the halftime score from being respectable, bursting through the Hoya line at midfield and dashing all the way to make the Wildcats' margin 23-0.

In the third period, Georgetown again played hard to get but succumbed at 10:03. Pasquariello went for 8 from the 13; then for 4 more to the 1.

Strangely, he was ignored on

Pittsburgh Skates Over Lions, 7 to 3

Washington, Nov. 12.—The Washington Lions got a much-needed skating lesson from the Pittsburgh Hornets last night before 2331 Uline Arena customers. The 7-3 rout rode the Hornets into a tie for the American Hockey League's western division lead.

The Lions proved apt pupils after being hopelessly outclassed for most of the first two periods, outscoring the Hornets 3 to 2 in the third. One of the too little, too late Lion goals came off the stick of Len Mutcheson, a smooth-gliding newcomer, who performed ably in his first Uline appearance.

Although the Hornets were obviously the flashier outfit, it hardly showed in the first period scoring; Harry Taylor's close, high goal at 5:03, and it hardly showed in the second, except for a gruesome spell of about three minutes when the Hornets pumped in four goals.

Lew Crowdis' sad three minutes started with Sid Smith's goal at 11:13, a slow twister with English on it that slid around the goalie's taut stick. In 30 seconds Bill Benson scored; another minute, Benson again. Then at 14:17, while the Lions were floundering about dumbfounded, Ray Ceresino took a pass from Taylor and poured in the coup de grace.

Post Reporters Cover Big Grid Games Again Today

Washington Post staff reporters will be on the scene again today to bring you coverage of some of the Nation's biggest games. Here's the line-up:

North Carolina-Maryland (Griffith Stadium)—Morris Siegel (the game story); Bill Burnett and Sports Editor Bus Ham, color pieces.

Navy at Columbia—Shirley Povich.

West Virginia at Virginia—Jack Walsh.

Caps Meet Fort Wayne Here Tonight

Tar Heel interest in this area won't all be concentrated in College Park today. Some of it will drain off to Uline Arena where the Washington Capitols will celebrate North Carolina night in honor of Bones McKinney and Leo Katkaveck, products of North Carolina and N. C. State, respectively.

In addition to the rah-rah interest, the evening features one of the newcomers to the Basketball Association, the Fort Wayne Pistons, who never finished lower than third in eight years of National Basketball League competition.

The Pistons move mainly around John Pelkington, a 14-year pro who stands 6 feet 6 inches. Pelkington scored 512 points last season, the Pistons' top individual performance. Working with him as the big Fort Wayne point-making combination, will be Leo Klier who had an even better record in the National League last year.

Klier, a Notre Dame grad, rung up 612 points for the Indianapolis Jets last year. Fort Wayne got him in an off-season trade.

The Caps, meanwhile, keep looking better and better. They've now won five in a row, the last one Thursday night in Baltimore where they had to make up a 15-point deficit in the last period.

G. W. Swamps Norview, 32-7

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 12.—Ted Potts tossed three touchdowns and scored one himself tonight to lead George Washington High of Alexandria to its fifth straight victory, 32-7, over Norview High.

The triumph bolstered GW's hold on third place in the Virginia High School League Group 1 Conference with a record of four victories a tie and a loss.

Here's how it went:

1. Potts scored from 13 yards out, capping an 80-yard drive in the first period.

2. Potts passed one yard to Billy Smith for a touchdown, topping an 84-yard march highlighted by Bobby Via's 57-yard sprint, in the second period.

3. Via scored on a 9-yard run after Potts returned the second-half kickoff 86 yards.

4. In the same period, Potts passed 10 yards to Ed Johnson, who ran 54 yards to score.

5. Smith scored his second touchdown on another pass from Potts good for four yards after an interception set up the score, in the final period.

With two minutes left, Norview scored its only touchdown on a 75-yard trek, Ray Horton finally going over from the 1. Norview's Bill Smith converted.

George Washington	6	7	13	6—32
Norview	0	0	0	7—7

Celtics Defeat Fort Wayne, 84-75

Boston, Nov. 12 (AP).—Led by Eddie Ehlers who notched 22 points, the Boston Celtics pinned an 84-75 Basketball Association of America defeat on the Fort Wayne Zollner Pistons at the Boston Garden tonight.

Some 6283 fans turned out to see Fort Wayne lose its fifth consecutive game of the infant season. It was Boston's third straight triumph at home, all in the last week.

Gavilan Beats Tony Pellone

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Kid Gavilan, flashy Cuban contender, kept in the running for a welter title shot tonight by punching out a 10-round unanimous decision over Tony Pellone of New York in Madison Square Garden. Gavilan weighed 147 and Pellone 146¼.

Schoolboy Scores All of His Team's 42 Points for Record

Blairsville, Pa., Nov. 11 (AP).—The score read "Blairsville 42, Elder Ridge 0" today but it might well have read "Constantino 42, Elder Ridge 0."

Halfback Anthony (Bud) Constantino scored all six touchdowns for his team and kicked the six extra points.

The 42 points he collected gave him a total of 218 for the season and a new record for the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League.

Leahy Asks Press To Help Him Land Army, Michigan

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 12 (AP).—Frank Leahy, Notre Dame football coach, told newsmen today he would like to schedule such teams as Minnesota, Michigan and Army "and I believe that you gentlemen of the press can help bring such games about."

Leahy's remark was occasioned by conjecture that Notre Dame, Michigan and Army would finish their seasons undefeated—creating a problem in picking the mythical national champion.

The Irish coach was talking about regular schedules. Notre Dame has a policy against post-season games.

Leahy discussed the Notre Dame-Northwestern game here tomorrow with his customary pessimism and said he believed one point would decide the winner—either way. He asserted Northwestern has more team speed than any opponent Notre Dame has met this season.

W. L. Smashes Cadets, 21-12

Jack Gilfillan's three touchdowns paced Washington-Lee High of Arlington to its sixth straight win, 21-12, over St. John's last night before 5500 fans at Arlington.

The Johnnies took the lead on the first play from scrimmage, when Bunny Wallace passed 30 yards to Gene Metulla who ran 40 yards to score. Neither team scored after that until Gilfillan took over in the third period.

He capped a 60-yard drive in that period with a 2-yard scoring plunge. Then on the first play of the final period, he took a pass from Biff Johnson and streaked 50 yards to a touchdown. Later in the period Johnson connected again to Gilfillan on a 40-yard play, Klink Prince contributing the final block to make the touchdown possible. Eppie Riddle converted the three extra points for W-L, two by placement and the other on a plunge.

Wallace scored the Johnnies' other touchdown in the fourth period to no avail.

It was W-L's seventh victory in nine games, and St. John's third loss as against one triumph and three ties.

Big Game Notes

Tatum Says It's Carolina By '3 Touchdowns Today'

Maryland goes into the North Carolina game today at a distinct disadvantage. The district weather forecaster, M. N. Hunter, is a North Carolina graduate, and predicts light rains. Hunter, who saw the Tar Heels win, 19-0, on a rainy day last year, thinks rain will help his Tar Heels and admitted he was doing all he could to bring on the showers. . . . Terp Coach Jim Tatum, who has experienced horrible luck in The Washington Post's weekly pick the winners contest, says it's Carolina "by three touchdowns today". . . "If they play their best ball game and we play our best, they should win by three touchdowns. If they're not up to par and we are, we may give them a good ball game." . . . Carolina Coach Carl Snavely arrived here with his Tar Heels at 4 p. m. and continued to be as doleful as ever. . . . "We shall know what we shall know about 4:30 Saturday afternoon," Snavely muttered. . .

Over 2500 North Carolina students will parade through downtown Washington this morning. . . . The 11-piece North Carolina band will accompany the Chapel Hill rooters. The parade forms at 1 a. m. at 14th and K sts., nw., and will follow a route down 14th to E st., down E to 10th and up 10th back to 14th and K. . . . At 1 p. m. the Carolina motorcade of some 300 cars will start for Griffith Stadium.

Terps, N. C. Clash Today

offs, wide, dangerous pitchouts and laterals.

When Turyn isn't running or passing, it'll be Hubie Werner, Johnny Idzik, Jimmy LaRue, or Vern Seibert running wide with either Harry Bonk and Earl Roth ramming the middle.

Defensively, the Terps are almost as rugged as their opponents. Maryland is fourth in total defense, thanks to a stout line headed by Tackles Ray Krouse, 246, and Jim Goodman, 260. Justice and Rodgers, Carolina's two passers, will find the Maryland pass defense stiff, too. The Terps are tops in the Nation in that department.

The difference in the two ball clubs is Justice. Maryland has no back who can cope with the sensational Choo-Choo. Maryland coaches fear their team lacks the speed in the backfield to catch the hot-footing Justice once he squirms by the line.

Except for Reserve Center Bill Everson, used chiefly on defense, Maryland is in tip top physical shape for the clash. Everson injured a shoulder and probably won't be used.

The Tar Heels, also are ready. They've snapped out of the doldrums which followed their tie with W. & M. last week and arrest to regain their all-conquering ways.

Maryland could and may win, but from here it's Carolina by three touchdowns to one.

Two Track Standards Also Fall

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 12.—A world's record and three track marks were set today as the Maryland Jockey Club rang down the curtain on its 1948 season. It was a fitting climax to a session distinguished for many speed demonstrations.

Here's the line-up:

1. Mill River Stable's Miss Grillo turned in time of 4:14 3-5 for 2½ miles, sending into discard the world standard of 4:16 3-5 set by Golden Myth at Ascot, England, on June 5, 1922. The track mark here was 4:20 1-5 held by Megogo since 1944.

2. Brookmeade Stable's Chains stepped a mile and a furlong in 1:50 4-5 to knock a fifth of a second off the record of Watervale made 37 years ago and a constant target for the Nation's best horses.

3. Mrs. E. DuPont Weir's Royal Governor sped through the stretch to register time of 1:42 2/5 to clip a fifth off the mark set by Greentree Stable's 2-year-old Capot early in the present meeting.

Flying Missel Second

Miss Grillo drove to a length and a half victory in the seventeenth running of the $25,000 added Pimlico Cup, longest stake event in this country.

In contrast to her triumph last year, when she won by a couple of city blocks with Jockey Con McCreary standing in the saddle and waving to the crowd, Miss Grillo today was under hard urging to win by a length and half from King Ranch's Flying Missel. A half length farther back in the thrilling finish came H. L. Straus' Pilaster.

A crowd of 12,000 installed the imported South American mare as the choice and her backers collected a $5.40 mutuel. Miss Grillo was clocked in 4:14 3/5 for the gruelling test, clipping two seconds off the world mark of Golden Myth set at Ascot, England on June 5, 1922. The previous track record here was 4:20 1/5, established by Christiana Stables' Megogo in the 1944 running of the Pimlico Cup.

Miss Grillo was coupled in the betting with J. de Atucha's Bois Joli as the Trainer H. A. Luro entry. Bois Joli was used as a pacemaker and collapsed after doing that job for most of a mile. During this stage McCreary on Miss Grillo, Henri Mora on Flying Missel and Carson Kirk on Pilaster were restrainir.g their mounts.

Ding-Dong Finish

Miss Grillo was first to move. Walter M. Jefford's Loyal Legion had supplanted Bois Joli in front. McCreary gave his mare the gun and she overtook Loyal Legion in noble fashion. The crowd expected the mare to draw far out, as was the case in the 1947 renewal.

However, Flying Missel and Pilaster rallied and went after the 6-year-old. McCreary went to a drive and it is well that he did. Flying Missel on the outside and Pilaster on the inside both packed punch in the early stretch. But approaching the wire, Miss Grillo turned on more steam and there was a daylight gap between her and her rivals going into the wire.

Dixie Classic Starts Today

The $2000 Dixie Classic, one of the most important duckpin tournaments conducted by the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, will be held today over three Washington alleys.

With $500 as the first prize, the record field of 125, including the District's top talent, will begin firing at 11 a. m. at Hyattsville Recreation. At 3 p. m. the bowlers will move over to Clarendon Bowling Center, while the final 5 games of the 15-game block will be held at 8 p. m. at Colonial Village.

Bob Fisher of Baltimore, ranked No. 3 in the country, is the defending champion. He scored 2036 to win last season.

MISS GRILLO, $5.40, $3.60, $2.40; FLYING MISSEL, $3.60, $2.40; PILASTER, $2.20.

MISS GRILLO was steadied while saving ground and in good position for mile and quarter, came around PETROL POINT, moved to LOYAL LEGION without effort to get to front. Was put to drive when challenged by FLYING MISSEL and PILASTER and held on gamely. FLYING MISSEL, allowed to race on own courage early, improved position sharply and hung through final sixteenth. PILASTER was allowed to trail far back early under steadying restraint, rallied when asked, saved ground and tired right at close. NATURAL was well placed for two miles, weakened under pressure at end. LOYAL LEGION displaced BOIS JOLI as pacemaker approaching mile point, drew clear and tired badly when attempting to stay with MISS GRILLO'S move. PETROL POINT had speed for mile and faltered. BOIS JOLI tired after setting early pace.

St. Albans Trims Landon, 26 to 7

By Billy Gilbert

St. Albans scored three times in the second half and trounced Landon, 26-7, yesterday at Landon.

The Saints scored in the first period when Walter Leach plowed over from 4 yards out. Landon came back to take the lead in the second quarter, when Tom Barrett bucked over from the 1. Win Faukner passed to Jim Miller for the conversion.

In the third period, Bob Shorb passed to End Roger Kingsbury for 35 yards and another score. Shorb's attempted kick from placement was blocked.

Leach scored again in the final period when he went off tackle from 12 yards out. Shorb again passed to Kingsbury for the extra point.

The final St. Alban score came with two minutes left to play. A Landon drive stalled on its own 26. Two plays later Shorb weaved and spun his way across the goal line from 25 yards out. Frank Lee bucked over to add the extra point.

Top Horses In Mellon 'Cap At Middleburg

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 12.—The Mary Mellon Steeplechase Handicap, featured 2½-mile brush event on Saturday's five-race program sponsored by the Middleburg Hunt Race Associatioon, promises to bring together the cream of America's infield performers.

Although many contenders met in the Manly, Pimlico's $18,650 'chase offering on Wednesday, it is highly probably that the winner, Ella C. Widener's Adaptable, will meet competitors who passed up the event at Pimlico.

Morris H. Dixon, trainer of the Philadelphia-owned 'chase star, told Daniel C. Sands, chairman of the race committee, that the Manly winner would start if he remained in his present peak condition.

Should he accept the issue here, the route runner will hook up with Mrs. Stephen C. Clark, jr.'s, Trough Hill. The latter was declared from the Maryland stake in order to be ready for this test. Also a distance runner, having won the Brook Steeplechase, a 2½-mile Belmont Park feature, the locally owned 'chaser has been allotted 157 pounds.

the payoff plunge but John Geppi had little trouble scoring.

Villanova completely fooled the Hoyas on its last score. Fullback Tom Clavin, who hadn't tossed a pass all year, threw one that End Ed Berrang took in to the Georgetown end zone.

No doubt, Georgetown missed brilliant Billy Conn, just about its whole offense. But the Hoyas could have used some defense tonight, too.

Status Doubtful for Tomorrow

Bagarus' Sore Toe, Hartley's Sore Rib Only 'Skin Injuries

A sore toe was likely to spoil tomorrow's hometown debut of Steve (Buggsy) Bagarus, former Washington Redskin backfield star now making a comeback.

Bagarus, participating in yesterday's strenuous drill for a Detroit Lion clash at Griffith Stadium, limped badly and Coach Turk Edwards declared him a doubtful quantity.

Tomorrow's appearance, if Bagarus' toe heals, will be his first in Washington since December 1, 1946, when he performed with a Redskin team which lost to the Green Bay Packers, 20-7. It will be his second grid start since his leg was broken while he played with the Los Angeles Rams on October 5, 1947.

Halfback Howard Hartley's sore rib was the only other unexpected injury yesterday. Otherwise the 'Skins will be in excellent shape as they seek their fourth straight victory

G. W. Freshmen Whip Virginia, 13-6

Alexandria Hospital Must Close Unless Aided

City Council Asked By Board to Give $110,000 to Ease Financial Crisis

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Alexandria Hospital will have to close January 31 unless new sources of income become available, its directors announced yesterday.

The hospital's financial plight was made public after a closed meeting Thursday night where the hospital corporation and its board of directors asked the City Council for $110,000 to forestall its closing.

Hospital President David S. Haddock said the hospital was forced to its decision by the following conditions:

1. There was an estimated 1948 operating deficit of $70,000.

2. The fund drive last summer which took in $184,000 in pledges has been consumed in paying back debts. The fact that such a drive was held less than six months ago means the hospital cannot appeal again to the public immediately.

Credit Exhausted

3. The hospital's credit is exhausted.

4. The hospital is two months behind in bills owed to merchants. Unless these bills are paid within two months, the hospital can buy neither food nor medicine.

5. If the hospital pays these bills it will have to miss a pay day and face the possibility of its staff leaving.

At Thursday's meeting, Van C. Adams, hospital administrator, explained the heart of the problem: 33 per cent of all patients are unable to pay part or all of their bills; another 26 per cent come to the hospital via some group hospitalization plan which pays less than actual cost.

The directors expressed confidence in Adams, who took over in the shake-up last winter that followed a critical survey report on the hospital's administration. The problem, they said, was not one of administration, but of finding enough money to pay for essentials.

$60,000 Grant Sought

The $110,000 sought from city funds was listed as two items: (1) $50,000 for the hospitalization of indigents certified by the welfare department, and (2) a $60,000 grant as "the city's share in the responsibility of providing for adequate . . . health protection for its citizens."

The welfare department estimates the city's contribution to the hospital in 1948 will be about $40,000.

Reaction of councilmen to the request for funds was varied. John W. Tulloch favored making the appropriation because:

"If we don't, we will have to spend much more on a municipal hospital."

Others conceded something must be done, but they wanted to be sure every other possibility had been exhausted before committing themselves. One suggestion, which the hospital corporaiton endorsed Thursday night, was a meeting of the governing bodies of Alexandria and Fairfax County, to find if each could contribute.

Legality Questioned

Mayor William T. Wilkins questioned the legality of making a flat grant of city funds to the privately operated hospital. City Attorney Joseph M. Pancoast declined to comment on the legal implications yesterday.

The city's share in the responsibility of operating the hospital long has been a bone of contention. In 1947, the hospital threatened to refuse city welfare patients unless the city raised its daily rates and make a flat grant.

The City Council refused to make a grant, but finally in November, 1947, agreed to pay $8.81 a day for its indigent sick of the 1946 rate of $6. This year the city is paying $13.79 a day.

Annual Canary Show Opens With 1000 Colorful Entries

The Washington Post

"THE WINNAH, MAYBE?" asks Mrs. Eunice Moore of herself. Mrs. Moore, of 7001 Oxon Hill rd. se., is holding a Cocktail canary.

Canaries to match the curtains or the wallpaper was a definite possibility yesterday as the National Capital Canary Club opened its fourteenth annual Grand National Bird Show with an exhibit of more than 1000 of the little fellows in all shades and colors.

Although not too strong in the singing department, the canaries, ranging in color from mauve and apricot to the coveted flamingo red, make an interior decorator's job fairly simple. They can be seen from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. today and Sunday at the Odd Fellows Temple, 419 7th st. nw.

Bird fanciers, tired of the ordinary canary color, began experimenting in cross breed coloration more than 50 years ago. Although deep red is the dream of most fanciers, Washington club members have concentrated on producing a black-capped, black-winged canary with a completely white body.

Included in the exhibit are birds entered by the International Canary Club from the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico, with a group of more than 50 wild birds. Prizes for all classes and types will be awarded Sunday.

Athlete Gets Probation in $53 Robbery

William J. Denikos, 19, former Central High School athlete, was given a three-year probation term yesterday in District Court, while his two companions in crime were given prison terms.

Denikos, who lives at 4816 7th st. nw., pleaded guilty to the $53 robbery and beating of Granville J. Jones, of Arlington, Va. His accomplices, both of whom had juvenile records, were James T. Triantis, 18, who was sentenced to eight months to five years jail, and John Triantis, 19, who was given one to five years. The Triantis youths reside at 200 Rittenhouse st. nw.

In another case, Albert H. Shelton, 46, former resident manager of an apartment house, and formerly residing at 934 I st. nw., was given four years' probation for shooting and wounding Julius A. Bradshaw of 2540 14th st. nw. According to police, the two men were having a landlord-tenant quarrel when the shooting occurred.

Richard B. Wilson, 23, of 50 15th st. se., was given three to nine years for manslaughter in the fatal cutting of Richard E. Brown, 40, of 2932 Pomeroy rd. se.

Alex Ferguson, 31, of 1636 14th st. nw., also convicted of a knifing manslaughter, received three to nine years for killing John Pollard, 29, of 824 24th st. nw.

Johnnie J. Perry, 18, of 1124 Congress st. ne., was given 5 to 15 years in prison for a holdup netting $34 from a High's Ice Cream Store at 4338½ Sheriff rd. ne.

Harold Coleman, 56, of 2400 14th st. ne., received three to nine months for operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Dawes' Sentence Stayed by Judge Pending Probe

Imposition of sentence on Lieut. William A. Dawes, jr., convicted of assault and battery on a young District nurse by a Prince Georges County jury late Thursday, was deferred yesterday pending a presentence investigation.

Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury ordered the probe only a few minutes before Dawes was scheduled to be sentenced. He said he had decided to defer sentence until November 22 as the result of information which came to him late yesterday afternoon, indicating an investigation would be advisable.

The 28-year-old Bolling Field flier was convicted on the assault and battery charge after the mixed jury acquitted him on charges of rape and assault with intent to commit rape. He is free on $500 bond pending disposition of the case.

Norway Joins Foes Of Antarctic Plan

An American proposal to put the Antarctic under some form of international control has run into more difficulties.

State Department officials were advised yesterday that Norway has given the idea a cold shoulder. Chile and Argentina already have raised objections.

Norway is willing to take part in joint research in the Antarctic, but will not compromise on her claims to territory, an Oslo government announcement said.

Bandit Gets $20

Store Owner Held Up 3d Time in Year

Max Levine, 61, was held up for the third time this year yesterday at 8:30 a. m. in his hardware store at 1702 7th st. nw.

Levine said the bandit was a Negro of about 25, about 5 feet 8 and wearing a topcoat and a brown hat pulled down over his face.

The description given by Levine, police said, was strikingly similar to the one given of the bandit who last Monday slugged the manager of a Giant Food Store, 10th and U sts. nw., and escaped with $3500.

Levine said the man came in his store, seized him by the throat and said:

"Open the cash register or I'll kill you."

When Levine opened the cash register, the bandit reached in and scooped up $20 in bills, then demanded that Levine give him his wallet. When the merchant told him he had no wallet, the bandit searched him and learned that Levine was telling the truth and disappeared on 7th st.

Levine was held up last January in his store and robbed of $30. He was victimized again several months ago and robbed of $50.

2 Robbers Get $474 From Shoe Store

Two men who had larceny in their blood instead of leather goods on their minds robbed the Ed Beam Shoe Store, 521 11th st. nw., of $474 shortly before 6 o'clock last night.

Beam the proprietor, who lives at 2322 Fort Scott dr., Arlington, told police that when the two men entered his shop, one purchased a 25-cent can of shoe polish.

Then the second man said he wanted to look at some women's shoes in the rear of the store. Beam accompanied him back. The first man remained in the front of the store.

Suddenly Beam heard the man in the front of the store shout, "Come on," and looked and saw the man racing from the store with his strong box. The second man also sprinted to the crowded 11th st. and disappeared.

Beam said the strong box contained $474 in cash and $242 in checks.

Beam said one man was a light-skinned Negro, about 6 feet 2, and weighing about 200 pounds. The second man, a dark-skinned Negro, was about 5 feet 10, 150 pounds and had a small mustache.

D.A.R. Rule Denies Constitution Hall For Negro Benefit

The DAR has rejected a request by the National Council of Negro Women for use of Constitution Hall for a benefit concert, council officials said yesterday.

(Under rules governing use of the building Negroes may attend performances but may not appear on the stage.)

Request for use of the hall was made by Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the Negro group, in a letter last month to Mrs. Roscoe O'Byrne, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Police Raid Optimists' 'Horse Race'

Play of 300 Stopped By Officers; Club Chairman, Lodge Owner Arrested

A "horse race" game staged for charity purposes to raise money for community work was raided by police as a gambling party.

Close to 300 members of the Arlington Optimist Club were in Hunter's Lodge, on Route No. 211, 4 miles west of Fairfax, Va., when Fairfax County police marched in about midnight Wednesday night.

Arrested were:

C. K. Vance, 506 N. Highland st., proprietor of the establishment, on charges of permitting gaming, permitting liquor on the premises and selling beer after hours.

William R. Schreck, 2704 Central ave., Alexandria, chairman of the Optimist Club's ways and means committee, on a charge of gaming.

Both men were released under bond for appearance in Fairfax Trial Justice Court Wednesday at 10 a. m.

Club President Harris Taylor yesterday explained the party had been staged for the purpose of having a good time and at the same time raising money for its community work. He likened the game played to bingo.

The game operated like a real horse race. Movies of old races were shown and players placed their bets. Taylor said 75 per cent of the money was to go to the winners; 25 per cent to the club's fund.

Arlington Police Make Haul in Numbers Raid

A raiding party of seven Arlington policemen yesterday swooped down on a suspected numbers headquarters, arrested the two occupants, seized more than $100 in cash and a quantity of numbers slips.

Found in the suspected headquarters at 1930 N. Cameron st., Arlington, were Mrs. Esther Burgess, 43, and James (Slim) Samuel, 49, who live at that address.

Both were charged with operating a lottery, and released in $500 bond each for appearance in Arlington County Court next Wednesday.

Police said Mrs. Burgess was sitting on numbers slips from the day's play when they entered the house. They reported that "hundreds" of slips were found in boxes and on tables throughout the house.

The raiding party, led by Detective Chief C. B. Pressley, also included Detectives Jack Conway, John Wise, John Sanders, Dudley Rector, George Coppage and William Hammer, an identification technician.

Navy to 'Rescue' Wrights' Plane, Stranded in Strike

The Navy said last night the carrier Palau will "rescue" the famous Wright plane, Kitty Hawk, now stranded at Halifax, Nova Scotia, and bring it to New York.

The museum relic originally was due to arrive at New York yesterday aboard the Mauretania. But the Mauretania had to unload at Halifax because of the longshoremen's strike.

The Navy said the Palau was scheduled to arrive at Halifax Monday, anyway, and will leave there November 17, for New York.

The Kitty Hawk, first powered plane built by the Wright brothers is being shipped home in the original crates made by Orville Wright for the craft's trip to England 20 years ago.

After Orville Wright's death, it was decided to return the plane to the United States. A Navy motor van will bring it from New York to the National Museum here.

Trade, Auto Taxes Sought In Arlington

Public Hearing Set Dec. 6 on Proposal To Raise $400,000

New taxes on Arlington businesses, professions and autos to bring in roughly $400,000 in revenue yearly were proposed last night by the Arlington County Board.

The tax proposals will be aired at a public hearing before the board December 6 at 8 p. m. in the courthouse. Board action will follow.

The taxes would go into effect next January. They were proposed by the board after weeks of conferences with the Bureau of Public Administration of the University of Virginia which had acted in advisory capacity.

The $400,000 sum was expected to be gathered from the auto and the business-professional levy on a 50-50 basis.

Under the tax, for example, a retail license for restaurants, hotels and clubs to sell wine and beer would cost a flat $75 annually plus 15 cents for each $100 in gross receipts in addition to the regular State license fee. Pawnbrokers would be required to pay $250 annual license fee.

Professional persons under the proposed plan, including physicians, architects and dentists, will pay 52 cents yearly for each $100 of gross receipts; retail merchants, 15 cents; wholesale merchants, 11 cents; places of amusement, 37 cents.

Polio Strikes Boy, 8, Making Area Total 248

One new District polio case was reported by the Health Department yesterday, raising the Greater Washington total for the year to 248, compared with 45 for this date last year.

The case was an 8-year-old boy from the 600 block of Morton st. nw. at Children's Hospital. The report raised the District total to 128. The nearby Maryland and Virginia figure is 120.

All Angles Probed

3 Policemen In Grill Case Questioned

Three plainclothes policemen ordered back to patrol duty after they offered sharply conflicting testimony in the Mitchell's Grill case, yesterday were questioned by Inspector George Wallrodt.

Later, Wallrodt, ordered by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett to probate all "angles" in the police testimony conflict, indicated no further shakeup in the Police Department is likely until his own investigation is completed.

Wallrodt is not expected to make a report until the Alcohol Beverage Control Board disposes of the 57 charges of liquor law violations against the grill.

The ABC board hearings will be resumed Tuesday.

Three police principals in the case shifted backg to uniformed patrol duty, were Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, transferred from the First to the Sixth Precinct; and Privates Samuel E. Wallace and Miles Richey, from the vice squad to the Fourth and Seventh Precincts, respectively.

Wallace testified before the ABC board that he had seen 57 violations committed in Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., Manthos charged that Wallace admitted having framed the proprietor, Henry David, a brother of a Tenth Precinct policeman, Mitchell David. Richey testified he accompanied Wallace at the beginning of the observation of the grill, but withdrew when he was recognized as a policeman.

Legion Urged To Continue Peace Effort

In a strong plea for universal military training and a unity transcending individual differences, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, last night urged members of the American Legion to continue efforts to win the peace.

In presentation ceremonies of a permanent charter to the Clark V. Poling Post No. 64, named in honor of his son, Dr. Poling said: "The soldiers in battle dealt with reality and accepted it. They gave us time to win the peace and we can do it if we are united and strong."

The privileges and freedoms we enjoy, he said, require certain obligations. Universal military training is that obligation and is an inherent part of American democracy.

Before his speech to more than 100 Legion members in the Department of Commerce auditorium, Dr. Poling, a Reserve Army chaplain, was inducted as a member of the new post by S. Perry Brown, National American Legion commander.

Clark Poling was one of four Army chaplains who gave their lifebelts to save others when the troopship Dorchester was sunk in the Atlantic in 1943. A 3-cent stamp commemorating the heroism of the chaplains was issued in May of this year.

FEPC Official's Ouster Requested By Negro Council

The National Council of Negro Women has requested the removal of Judge Annabel Matthews from the Fair Employment Practices Committee, officials of the council announced yesterday.

The removal was asked in letters to the Civil Service Commission and to President Truman, which charged that Judge Matthews "has borne the stamp of discrimination against minority groups."

The issue stemmed from refusal several months ago of the District branch of the American Association of University Women, of which Judge Matthews was an official, to admit a Negro, Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, to membership.

Bars Raised To Newsmen In Will Case

Witness Questioning In Patterson Contest Forbidden by Court

Newspaper reporters will be barred from pretrial questioning of witnesses in the Patterson will contest, under an agreement reached in District Court yesterday.

The depositions of such witnesses, however, will become public once they are filed with the court, unless they are specially "sealed" by court direction.

When reporters appeared yesterday in offices of attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka—who is challenging the will of her mother, the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, former publisher of the Washington Times-Herald — William A. Roberts, one of Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys, announced:

"I feel that I must ask that the press not attend this session."

Charges "Premature" Release

He said Federal rules intend the taking of depositions to be "confidential," and none should be released to the newspapers until they are checked and filed with the court.

Roberts said three depositions were released "prematurely" without his consent Wednesday by his opponents in the case—attorneys for the executors named in the contested will—and that this could prejudice questioning of later witnesses.

Lewis G. Caldwell, executors' attorney, maintained the press could be present, stating, "I don't know why all the facts cannot be made available, instead of a one-sided impression."

"Your client, Drew Pearson, and the client of your associate law firm, the New York Star, have published at length matters pertaining to this case," declared Caldwell, "including an affidavit from a supposed witness."

"I have frequently represented Drew Pearson, but I do not represent Drew Pearson in this matter," countered Roberts. "I do not represent the New York Star . . . I have not given any information to the New York Star," he replied.

Libel Threats, He Says

Roberts said there have been "threats of suit for libel sent to Drew Pearson" and a radio network and its stations. Countered Caldwell: "We've had a thorough retraction from the radio station."

[Editor's note: Columnist Pearson is a former husband of Mrs. Gizycka.]

The reporters remained, and in that supercharged atmosphere the action moved to District Court, where Roberts sought a formal order barring newsmen, although he said he did not "seek to limit the widest possible examination by the press" once depositions are filed.

There, Judge James W. Morris urged opposing counsel to agree, indicating that if they did not he would sign Roberts' order, although he noted, "People generally have the right to comment on matters" before the court, "and this court doesn't have the slightest idea of curtailing that."

The attorneys then agreed to bar newsmen, although Caldwell reserved the right to bring up the issue on later depositions. Later, with the press absent, the attorneys resumed taking a deposition from C. F. R. Ogilby, court-appointed collector for the estate of the late Charles B. Porter, former Times-Herald treasurer. Ogilby's deposition was not concluded, however, and will be resumed Wednesday.

On November 23, the executors' attorneys have announced, they plan to take a deposition from Mrs. Gizycka. This is expected to provide a broad preview of the entire case.

Bus Kills Woman, 80, Retired Physician

Dr. Sara W. Brown, Philanthropist, Dies in Ambulance On Way to Hospital

Dr. Sara Winifred Brown, 80, a retired physician and philantropist, was injured fatally at 4:15 p. m. yesterday when she was struck by a Capital Transit bus at 12th and K sts. nw.

Police said the bus, driven by William H. Evers, 28, of 13-U Ridge rd., Greenbelt, Md., struck the woman as she was crossing K st. in the crosswalk. The bus, police added, was going north on 12th st. and was making a left turn into K st.

Dr. Brown

Witnesses told police the woman's body was knocked about 12 feet by the impact.

She died in an ambulance en route to Emergency Hospital.

Evers was held for action of the coroner and charged with failing to give full time and attention and failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian. He was released in custody of Capital Transit attorneys pending the inquest.

For the past five years Dr. Brown had divided her time between a farm in Opequon, Va., and her sister's residence here, at 1330 13th st. nw. The sister, a doctor of pharmacy and a retired school teacher, is Dr. N. Fairfax Brown.

According to Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, the victim's prominence was recognized in 1924 when she was the first alumna named to the board of trustees of Howard.

He said she had been a successful doctor, had been prominent as a philanthropist and had done extensive work for public health services.

Area News in Brief

Youth Steals Purse Of Policeman's Wife

Police had their eyes peeled yesterday for a paint-bespattered youth who committed the unforgivable effrontery of rifling the house of a member of the police force.

Sirola

The policeman is Pvt. John Sirola, 63, on the force almost 30 years, 29 of which have been spent in the Ninth Precinct.

Currently, Sirola is using up some of his annual leave and yesterday found him painting the back porch of his house at 4000 24th st. ne.

By 11:30 a. m. he had completed painting the porch and had worked his way down to the bottom step of the porch. His wife, Anna, 52, was around the corner of the house talking to the mailman.

Then it happened! The back kitchen door swung open and a youth stepped out of the door onto the freshly painted porch. He took about two steps, then lost his footing. Wham!

The intruder skidded three or four feet on the wet paint, then sailed down the steps and over Sirola's head. The policeman fleetingly observed that the youth was carrying Mrs. Sirola's pocketbook which had been taken from the dining-room table.

The youth got to his feet and fled. Sirola, a paint brush still in one hand, took after him.

The youth's three quarter length chocolate brown coat cut the wind. Sirola lasted for about six blocks. Then others joined the chase, boys on bicycles, three telephone linemen and a group of neighbors.

One of the neighbors was reported to have taken a shot at the fugitive with a shotgun. The chase extended through alleys and side roads.

But the youth, described further as a Negro and a fast one, too, finally escaped into the woods behind the Franciscan Monastary.

Along the route of the chase was found the youth's coat and Mrs. Sirola's pocketbook. But the pocketbook was minus a wallet which contained $15.

Postlude

Rare Treat Is Afforded By Quartet

By Paul Hume

The Loewenguth String Quartet, whose permanent home is in Paris, played in the Library of Congress last night.

In Mozart's C Major quartet, known as the "Dissonant," and the famouse quartet of Maurice Ravel, the foursome showed themselves a beautifully balanced ensemble, immaculate in intonation and well versed in style.

It is a particular pleasure to hear French musicians play music by their own composers. The Ravel quartet had a style, achieved partly through a sense of ceaseless movement. Its rhythms were faultlessly expounded.

Since this quartet is scheduled to play the entire cycle of Beethoven quartets in New York, Washington was especially fortunate to hear them in a world premiere, in addition to Mozart and Ravel. Egon Wellesz, world-celebrated composer and scholar, was represented by his sixth and latest string quartet.

Wellesz is no less an authority on ancient Byzantine culture than on music. His music, from its first hearing, cannot be analyzed in detail. In content it is thoroughly original, but derives from the harmonic idiom of Schoenberg in the same way as the writing of Alban Berg or Anton Webern.

Funds Status Under Charter Investigated

Legality of turning over Montgomery County funds to a successor under the new cnarter is being investigated by County Treasurer John B. Diamond.

The official said he is "legally responsible for county funds and because four to six million dollars is involved, I must be absolutely certain I have definite legal authority before acting.

Under the charter adopted by county voters on November 2, Diamond's post will be abolished and the functions of his office assumed by a department of finance.

He disclosed he had retained Attorney David E. Betts of Rockville, to investigate the matter. Betts was associated with Hubert A. Schneider, a Bethesda lawyer, who last summer launched a legal fight to block the charter referendum on the ground a budgetary provision was unconstitutional.

In another development, it was disclosed that E. Brooke Lee and Lacy Shaw, veteran Democratic leaders who have been politically inactive for 14 months, would lead a campaign by county Democrats to support a slate of charter council candidates to be nominated by the county's charter committee.

The charter committee currently is sifting some 100 names submitted to it for consideration as possible charter council candidates. A charter nominating committee headed by Allen H. Gardner is expected to make the slate of candidates public within two weeks.

An election for the first charter council of seven members is scheduled for January 6 and the new council will take office January 10.

3 Charges Lodged Against 16-Year-Old Boy After Wild Alley Pursuit by Police Car

Pvts. Frederick Long and Adam Ekas of the Twelth Precinct, a scout car team, saw a car whiz through a stop sign at 18th and Monroe sts. ne. at 5 a. m. yesterday.

When they took after the car, its driver began to zig-zag. They pursued the car through alleys in the 1500, 1600 and 1700 blocks of Otis st. ne.

Finally, at 26th and Otis sts. ne., when the driver attempted to make a right turn, the car jumped a curb and rammed into a cement mailbox post.

Long and Ekas found a frightened 16-year-old boy behind the wheel. The boy was charged with unauthorized use of an automobile, having no driver's permit and reckless driving (which included going through seven stop signs and speeding) and then was taken to the Receiving Home for Children.

A check showed the car had been stolen from Edward H. Spindler, of 1815 Otis st. ne., who was not aware it had been taken.

Former German Consular Officer Must Leave U. S.

By The Associated Press

The Immigration Service yesterday announced that Commissioner Watson B. Miller has upheld an order that Walter German Zingelmann, prewar German vice consul at Mobile, Ala., must leave this country.

The finding at Mobile was that Zingelmann was not admissable under the visitor's visa on which he came to this country to rejoin his American wife and children.

The Mobile office said Zingelmann was not a "bona fide visitor" and apparently intended to reside in the United States permanently, in view of the established residence of his family in Mobile.

Zingelmann may now take a further appeal to the Board of Immigration Appeals. If that fails, he may appeal direct to Attorney General Tom Clark.

Police Board Drops Charges By Prisoner

A Police Trial Board yesterday unanimously dismissed charges of maltreating and cursing a prisoner which had been brought against Pvts. Robert R. Callow, 35, and Roy C. Longenecker, 25, both of No. 13 Precinct.

The charges were based on a complaint by Frank S. Haskell, 50-year-old carpenter of 2544 14th st. nw., who said he had been struck on the head with a policeman's nightstick at about midnight on October 5, when Callow and Longenecker came to his apartment at 2544 14th st. nw. to investigate a neighbor's complaint about noise there.

Testimony by Miss Mary Marra, a nurse, and Dr. Melvin T. Alper of Emergency Hospital showed that five stitches were taken in Haskell's scalp.

Three other witnesses agreed Haskell had been struck, but disagreed as to whether one or both policemen allegedly beat him, on just where he was at the time, on whether there had been any drinking at the party, on whether Haskell had become unconscious, and on other circumstances. They were unable to identify the policemen on trial as those who had allegedly maltreated Haskell.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward A. Beard, a member of the Trial Board, said there seemed to be testimony that one policeman struck Haskell, but, he asked, "how can we tell which one?"

Lindbergh probably will visit other Pacific bases before returning to the United States, it was said.

Lindbergh has made similar studies of technical operational problems at Air Force installations in the United States during recent months.

Man, Woman Bound to Jury In 2 Slayings

Held were William Clifton Harris, 43, of 324 Allens court sw., and Alice Lucille Logan, 22, of 727 Quebec pl. nw.

Police said Harris, an employe of the Federal Works Agency, was arrested after his wife, Josephine, 33, died Wednesday at Gallinger Hospital. They said she was taken to the hospital after he beat her with the rung of a chair in their home November 3.

The Logan woman was held in connection with the death of William Green, 35, of 654 Morton st. nw., who was shot four times through the chest with a .32-caliber revolver Thursday night in his home during what homicide squad detectives termed a "lovers' quarrel."

Green was pronounced dead on arrival at Freedmen's Hospital.

Tar Heel Dance to Fete North Carolina Team

By Nicha Soure

WITH GREAT HOPES that it will be a victory dance, the North Carolina State Society of Washington will honor the members of the University of North Carolina football team at a reception and dance after the Maryland-North Carolina football game today.

Dave McWilliams' orchestra will furnish the music for the "extra dance"—the regular monthly dance will be held on November 27. The Tar Heel get-together will be held in the Hall of Nations ballroom of the Washington Hotel at 8:30 p. m.

Junior hostesses will be a bevy of attractive North Carolina girls attending Holton-Arms, Cathedral School and Marjorie Webster Junior College.

Special guests of the evening will include the students and their dates who accompany the Tar Heel eleven to Washington. (According to Sports Writer Morris Seigel, 6000 Tarheelians will come to Washington to attend the football game.)

Other guests of the society will be the members of the Washington Chapter of the University Alumni Association and other North Carolinian in official circles in the Capital.

James E. Webb, director of the budget and president of the local chapter of the University Alumni is serving as chairman of the society's dance, assisted by John K. Slear, president of the State society.

THE Kiss-O-Meter will probably be the center of attraction at the recreation program at the Navy Celebration of the Tennessee State Society on Monday. The society dance will be held in the new ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel at 8:30 p. m.

One of the most remarkable achievements in the field of "scientific development," the Kiss-O-Meter will be on exhibit at the Navy night fete. Following a talk by one of the Navy's scientists, who will explain how the gadget "works," the Kiss-O-Meter will be set up for operation and trial by anyone at the party who desires to test its amazing registration.

On the serious side the society will pay tribute to the United States Navy battleship Tennessee and cruisers Nashville and Memphis on the program preceding the social hour. Some of the wartime commanding officers of these ships who have accepted invitations to the Navy Night Celebration are Rear Admiral Clinton E. Braine, former commanding officer of the USS Memphis; Capt. Atherton Macondray, former commanding officer of the USS Nashville; and Capt. John B. Heffernon, former commanding officer of the USS Tennessee.

After a resume of the operations of these three ships the Navy will present large framed pictures of the USS Tennessee, the USS Nashville and the USS Memphis to the State society. Capt. Winston Folk, USN, deputy director of civil relations, who will act as master of ceremonies, will receive the pictures on behalf of the society.

The United States Navy Orchestra will present a 30-minute musical program and some of the Navy's many scientific research developments being carried on at its Naval Ordnance Laboratory in White Oaks will be on exhibit.

Dancing will follow the program to the music of Dave McWilliams Orchestra. Mrs. Winston Folk is general chairman of Navy Night.

All naval personnel in uniform will be admitted free. Tickets may be purchased at the door, or in advance by calling Miss Bessie Thrasher at Columbia 5486.

IT WILL be a gala affair at the Shoreham Hotel on November 20 when the Minnesota State Society will hold a Chicago-Northwestern Railroad Centennial Party at 9:30 p. m.

The entertainment will be in cabaret style with Barnee-Lowe furnishing the music. A color movie, "Song of the Pioneer," will be shown throughout the evening. This movie will depict America in the past century showing the role of the railroad in the development of the country.

THE Thanksgiving Turkey Trot of the Kentucky Society of Washington will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. on November 19 at the Shoreham Hotel.

Guests will wander from their "paddocks" (tables to non-Kentuckians) to dance to the music of Dave McWilliams orchestra.

THE Massachusetts State Society of Washington Thanksgiving Dance will be held in the Shoreham Hotel from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. November 19. Dave McWilliams will furnish the music.

MRS. FRANK HICKEY, Vermont Association moderator, announced that the New England Bean Supper will be held in the Universalist Church, 1810 16th st. nw. on Thursday, November 18, at 6:30 p. m.

Reservations can be made by contacting Mrs. Frederick I. Swift of All States Hotel, 19th and F sts., before November 16.

Notices for this column should be sent to State Society Editor, Room 409, The Washington Post, by 6 p. m. Thursday.

DOLLS made by displaced persons in Germany to thank Americans for CARE food packages are shown by Isabelle Wapler, seven-year-old daughter of Arnauld Wapler, Counselor of the French Embassy, and Mrs. Wapler. Admiring the dolls is Nikki Byelayac, 11-year-old DP who has just arrived in the United States from Germany. Gifts received from grateful recipients of CARE packages will be on display next week in the window of Gude's flower store at 1212 F st. nw.

CARE Gifts Will Be Shown In Display

European recipients of CARE food packages are saying thank you in many delightful ways. A collection of gifts, many of them hand made, sent to the United States by grateful people in Europe will be on display next week in Gude's window.

Jewelry, dolls, handwork, woodcarving and even a botanical collection from Latvia will be shown in the window of the florist's shop at 1212 F st. nw.

Despite Government-sponsored plans to aid Europe to get back on its economic feet, many people will go hungry or suffer from badly balanced diets this coming winter, before the large overall recovery programs begin to affect the "little fellow."

To simplify the sending of individual food packages to Europe, CARE prepares $10 packages which contain more food than can be purchased at retail prices by the average buyer. The new improved CARE package, containing 43,000 calories, reflects changes in the food needs in Europe. Containing more meat, fat, sweets and soap than ever before, it features rice for the first time.

CARE will send packages to specified friends and relatives or will see that they reach needy people in whatever country the donor chooses.

The local CARE office, 1013 Dupont Circle Building, has a standard food package on display. Gude's will also display a CARE package along with the thank-you gifts received from abroad.

Embassy Cocktail Party Honors Greek Visitors

By Marie McNair

THERE'S A REUNION at the Greek Embassy this week with the Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis welcoming bankers Theodor and Costi Eliasco and their wives.

Costi Eliasco and Mme. Eliasco have come from Greece where the former is president of Athens' largest bank; Theodor Eliasco is president of the Greek Bank of New York.

At the cocktail party given by the Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis yesterday in honor of the visitors, I was struck by the beauty and chic of Greek women.

There was the hostess, in a black noire gown made with high neck and long sleeves, the skirt draped in the back just below the knees. Pocket size Mme. Theodor Eliasco, who has a warm olive skin and shining black hair, wore a full gray taffeta frock with pearls, and her sister-in-law, who's also no bigger than a minute, was in black, a gown which combined shiny satin and velvet bands. Pale chartreuse ostrich fell in a froth to her shoulder from a pillbox hat.

Among the Diplomats

The Greek Embassy is a spot where you'll find "old Washington," but there were members of the Diplomatic Corps there, too, yesterday, and a sprinkling of officialdom. Around the buffet table I saw the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani and the Luxembourg Minister and Mme. LeGallais making a foursome. Mme. van Kleffens, wife of The Netherlands Ambassador, was there, and the good looking Egyptian Ambassador Kamil Abdul Rahim, with pretty Mme. Abdul Rahmin, in a rust colored suit and hat trimmed in pale pink.

Ray Muir, assistant chief of protocol, was there, and Mrs. Robert Lovett, wife of the Acting Secretary of State, in a dark blue taffeta frock and pancake hat of pale blue and violet velvet bows.

The Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin, came alone as Mme. Erkin is westward-bound to show her sister the scenic beauties on the way to the Coast.

Princess Hatim of Egypt chatted with Mme. Weissa who came with Mrs. Cornelius Bretch, the former Princess Emina Toussoun, and over in the corner, Robert Woods Bliss, U. Grant Smith and Walter Tuckerman had their heads together.

Royalls There

The Secretary of the Army, Kenneth Royall, was the tallest man at the party, and with him was Mrs. Royall, wearing a black lace frock, and their guest, Mrs. J. P. Zollicoffer of Hendersonville, N. C., wearing a brown frock sprinkled with bronze beads and brown feathers on her brown hat.

Mrs. McCeney Werlich looked about the house, recalled the days when she had danced there as a girl at Mrs. Henen Jennings' parties given for her son, Coleman.

Mrs. Burks Summers, who did such a magnificient job for the Dewey-Warren Club, wasn't a bit downhearted, but was laughing at the cable she received from Burks in Spain. "Cheer up," it read, "we've had 16 years of Democratic love and happiness. Will call you tomorrow."

Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, our recent Ambassador to the Netherlands, came with Mrs. Hornbeck, and also there were those two look-alikes, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt and Mrs. James L. Houghteling; Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor, Mrs. English Gordon, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, and Mrs. Blair Childs, just too, too smart in a trim navy blue silk suit with a matching hat of ostrich.

Mrs. Peter Dewey wore a periwinkle blue satin suit with black pin dots and a hat to match; the Frederick Hoyer Millars — he's British Minister—were there and also Miss Irene Boyle, Attache of the British Embassy, wearing a saucy hat of cream felt with red pompons falling from its brim.

Mrs. Walter Tuckerman knew practically everyone there, and making her debut again after several months' absence abroad was Miss Alice Dodge and it surely must have been a Paris hat she was wearing of burnt orange felt massed with black glycerined ostrich at the back.

Said how-de-do to Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim; and Mrs. Walter Wilds and her mother, Mrs. Joseph Farber, here from Pennsylvania. Met David LeBreton from the State Department, and John Phrantzis, new First Secretary of the Greek Embassy, a handsome rosy cheeked bachelor, who's just arrived from South Africa where he served as Charge d'Affaires in Pretoria.

Member of a distinguished family in Greece, Mr. Phrantzis is the grandson of Emanuel Benaki, a great philanthropist who gave the famous Bandakia Museum in Athens. And—to go on—there were Bill Jenkins of the State Department, Mrs. Austin Kautz, Mrs. Albert Niblack, Capt. William H. Watson and his pretty Kathleen, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Loring Christie. And Mme. Valsamis, mother of Mme. Dendramis, and Mlle. Ilena Valsamis, her sister, whom it is always a pleasure to see.

Gen. and Mrs. Walsh Return From Berlin

MAJOR Gen. and Mrs. Robert L. Walsh have returned to Washington after two years in Berlin and are staying with Mrs. Walsh's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom. Miss Suzanne Walsh, daughter of General and Mrs. Walsh, who was with them in Berlin, has returned to Foxhallow School in Lenox, Mass. Robert Walsh, jr., is in his junior year at Rensselaer Polytechnic School.

General and Mrs. Walsh will return to their house in Georgetown after January 1. General Walsh is to be stationed here and is a member of the Canadian and Mexican Commissions and the Inter-American Defense Board.

Mrs. Schiffeler Fetes Bazaar Group

MRS. CURT SCHIFFELER was hostess at luncheon yesterday at the Hotel Raleigh for members of the group working with her for the American Aid to France bazaar on November 17 at the French Embassy.

In the company were Mme. Armand Berard, Mme. Jean Baube, Mme. Jean-Claude Winckler, Mme. Jean Strauss, Mme. Maurice Ferro, Mlle. Sophie Meyer and Mrs. Russell Nicklin.

Secretary and Mrs. Royall Entertain Visitor

THE SECRETARY of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royall have as their guest for the weekend Mrs. J. P. Zollicoffer of Henderson, N. C., who arrived yesterday afternoon from New York. Today she and Secretary and Mrs. Royall will attend the North Carolina-Maryland football game as guests of Dr. and Mrs. Fred Morrison. Mrs. O. Max Gardner of Shelby, N. C., will also be a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Morrison.

Following the game Secretary and Mrs. Royall and Mrs. Zollicoffer will be guests at a buffet supper to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Love and later that evening they will attend the North Carolina Society reception and dance given for the the visiting football team.

Mrs. Gardner, widow of our Ambassador to Great Britain, has been spending a few days in Washington and will return tomorrow to Shelby. She was guest of honor at a supper party Wednesday evening given by Dr. and Mrs. Morrison at their home on Glenbrook rd.

Among the guests were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, wife of the Secretary of the Air Force; the Undersecretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Senator and Mrs. John McClellan, the Director of the Budget and Mrs. James E. Webb, Arthur Gardner, Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury; Dr. and Mrs. William Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Love, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Lamar Caudle, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox and Mrs. George Holmes.

The President's mother-in-law came on from Independence, Mo., last week to attend the postelection celebration for Mr. Truman, and yesterday she moved into Blair House.

Mrs. Truman and Miss Margaret Truman left Thursday to join the President in Florida. They expect to move across the street into Blair House soon after their return, to remain while the White House is repaired.

Miss Greene Is Married to Edw. McElwain

A marriage of wide interest to Washingtonians took place in Hermitage, Tenn., yesterday afternoon when Miss Margaret Banks Greene became the bride of Edwin McElwain. The ceremony was at Hermitage Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. James W. Henley officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ross Greene of Hermitage. Mr. McElwain, who practices law in Washington, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Church McElwain of Springfield, Mass.

Given in marriage by her father, Mrs. Elwain wore a ballerina gown of topaz taffeta and carried a bouquet of green and brown Cypridium orchids. Mrs. John K. Peebles was matron of honor for her sister. The best man was Adrian Fisher and the ushers included John K. Peebles and Charles C. Fuller.

Ask Anne — About Giving Away Clothes

I would appreciate your help in finding someone who would use and enjoy some clothing I have. In going through my trunks and closets I find quite a few good things which are simply too small or short for me. None are worn out, but a few need buttons, etc. I realize that I could give them to the Salvation Army or Red Cross, but these things, at least some of them, are dressy and would not give warmth or comfort to a needy person. Someone suggested that I might sell them, but there is no thrift shop in our locality and I would prefer sending the box to someone who could perhaps alter and enjoy wearing them. R. A. A.

I have discussed your kind offer with a social worker at the Florence Crittenton Home, for unmarried mothers and she tells me they would be delighted to receive the clothes. They have girls in restricted financial circumstances who would be so happy to have some pretty, moraleboosting clothes in which to leave the home. You may send the package directly to The Florence Crittenton Home, 4759 Reservoir rd., nw., Washington, D. C.

How do you remove white crayon from a child's paper blackboard? C. R. P.

The crayon mark should come off readily if sponged with carbon tetrachloride.

Around Christmas, 1946, a recipe for "Chip and Cherry Cake" was printed in the "Parade" supplement of The Sunday Washington Post. The cake was made with chocolate chips and candied cherries and nuts, and was really delicious. Somehow or other, I've lost the recipe, but the cake was so good I'd like to have a copy for my file. Can you or any of your readers supply me with it? E. F. G.

The recipe for Chip and Cherry Cake, which is as rich as regular fruit cake and can be made right up to the last minute, is as follows:

1 cup granulated sugar
1½ cups sifted flour
1 cup coarsely cut dates
1 cup halved candied cherries
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ pound chocolate bits or cut-up semisweet chocolate
2 cups coarsely chopped pecans or walnuts

Beat eggs and sugar together. Sift dry ingredients. Add chocolate, nuts, dates and cherries to flour, then fold in the egg-and-sugar mixture. Pour into oiled, waxed-paper-lined loaf pan about 9x5x3. Bake in 325-degree Fahrenheit oven 1½ hours to a crusty brown. Cool on rack. Trim, wrap in wax paper, and store in cake box.

I use a method of removing grease spots from wallpaper which I haven't seen in your column. It was told me by a paper-hanger. Heat Fuller's Earth in an old tin jar top on a pie tin. Apply to the spot thickly and thin out around the edges. I use a spatula for this purpose. It (the Fuller's Earth) will cling to the wall. When thoroughly cool, brush off with a whisk broom. This may require two applications but will positively not leave a ring. Of course grease spots should be attended to as soon as possible, since, if allowed to set, they become hard and waxy. E. L. H.

Can you get me a recipe for "Honey Cake?" I have good cookbooks but it is not in any of them. A. H. T.

HONEY ONE-EGG CAKE

2½ cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1/3 cup shortening
½ cup sugar
½ cup honey
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cream shortening with sugar and honey until fluffy. Add egg and beat thoroughly. Add sifted dry ingredients and milk alternately in small amounts, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Pour into greased pan and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 40 minutes. This makes one 8-inch cake.

I have four spring form cake pans which I use for cheese cakes only. They all leak as soon as the heat strikes them in the oven. Can you tell me something that I could do to correct this? L. A.

Lining the pan will overcome this difficulty. Grease the ring and the bottom of the pan lightly, then fit into it a lining of lightweight brown paper. If your recipe calls for a "crust" made by mixing butter, sweiback crumbs and sugar, this can then be packed in against the lining.

I have a baby carriage that I wish to store in the attic. It is gray and the collapsible type. Would you advise me how to prepare it for storage? I waxed it this summer. Should it be waxed again to help keep the hood from cracking? Also, if I should wrap it in paper what kind is best to use? W. L. B.

Be sure the leatherette is clean and then apply a coat of wax, rubbing well when it is thoroughly dry. The metal parts should be wiped free of dirt and waxed also. If the enamel is broken, either reenamel the metal work, sanding away loose enamel before painting or apply melted paraffiin to the exposed spots to prevent rusting. Fold the carriage, placing rolls of newspaper in the folds of the top so that they do not become sharp creases and cracks. Wrap in heavy brown wrapping paper or a heavy cloth—anything which will keep it free from dust. Or, you might slip it into a paper garment bag which is no longer useful as such.

I have some old, very worn blankets that aren't any good to us as covers now. They're just attracting moths, packed away as they are. I wonder if you know of some organization that could make use of them in any way. It seems to me the good parts might be salvaged and used for some purpose. T. G.

One organization that is anxious to get donations of old blankets is the Takoma Park Dorcas Society of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. They use them as padding for patchwork quilts which are sent to a school in the American zone in Germany. No matter how ragged the blankets are they are still usable for this purpose. The organization will call for them if you telephone Mrs. Ising, Shepherd 5517.

To R. E. J., who wrote about making hand-sewn gloves: We have a communication for you from another reader. If you will send us your name and address it will be forwarded to you.

Can you tell me who in Washington sells Salem china in Mount Vernon or Symphony pattern? R. D. P.

We have checked a number of local stores but have not found one handling this china. Perhaps some other reader can provide this information.

Look Behind Destructive Acts To Discover Child's Emotion

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It's pretty difficult for a mother to meet the destructive acts of her children without strong emotions. Destruction is often painful for the parent, since something of material or sentimental value is lost to her.

But a parent must look behind the act to discover its motive. Has the child done this accidentally? One mother who was infuriated when she found her small daughter cutting up a valuable handkerchief, remembered with chagrin, that on a previous occasion she had selected a bright handkerchief, cut a hole in the center and draped it over the doll's head. Now, her 3-year-old simply imitated that behavior when her dolly needed a new dress.

A child who sees its mother cut a picture or a recipe from a magazine, or its father hammer nails in the furniture, will want to do the same though the choice of magazine or the object which receives the nails may be those the parent cherishes. But the motives are not malicious ones and the child needs explanations not mean punishment for the mistaken act.

There is a type of destructiveness in which a child engages which is motivated by a spirit of revenge. The child is mad at the parent for mean or cruel treatment, and the object chosen for destruction is one the individual values highly.

In such case, the child is carrying out an age-old desire, that of getting back at someone who has done him harm. The behavior is primitive in that the child makes no effort to conceal his emotion but acts upon it.

This is the emotion which motivates an older child to injure a new baby in the family, because the baby has deprived him of his position as an only child. It is the motive of the child who wants to hurt a step-mother by cutting up the new curtains she has purchased.

If one is certain that destruction is based on a spirit of revenge, then cruel punishments only add to the child's distress. It is the emotion which needs erasing so there will be no more repetition of the undesirable behavior.

Cautious Notes on Laundering Shirts

Constant laundering of shirts is said to wear them out quickly but it has been proved scientifically that shirts worn soiled for more than a day without washing wear out much sooner than those that are washed frequently. Under the microscope it is evident that the dirt on the cloth contains particles that chafe and rub causing the threads to weaken. Perspiration, as well as many spots and stains, will rot fibers and cause them to wear. Laundering will not harm the shirt that has none of this extra soil as it eliminates heavy rubbing and a generous amount of soapflakes will do the work in short order.

The Way to Beauty

Aim for Curves and Streamlines

By Ida Jean Kain

SO MANY women keep a watchful eye on the scales, but forget the tape measure. That's not always slimming. The movie stars have a different system. They put the streamlining emphasis on measurements, for the camera amplifies.

If women generally would take that tip and exercise to keep slim in the middle, and eat to keep at healthy normal weight, they would have finer figures. Curves and an elegantly slim midriff are the style—and it's healthy and pleasing.

Our model leads off with what she calls a tone-up, and it's a natural to put tone in those important middle muscles . . .

Movement: Pulling up firmly with the abdominal muscles, bend one knee to chest and fling arms back on floor overhead. Stretch! Back to position and up with the other knee . . . repeat exercise a dozen times or so. Keep small of back pressed against the floor, make the knee-bends vigorous, and grip with the girdle muscles or all is lost.

Another 'oner . . .

Position: Lie on back on floor, arms down at sides, legs straight down.

Movement: Keeping a firm hold on the middle muscles, raise one leg up to a right angle with the body, knee straight. Slowly lower, and repeat with other leg. Ten times is enough for a starter. Concentrate the pull through the midsection, and don't let lower back cave in.

Mona Freeman, the lovely actress, illustrates her calisthenics card trick

Position: Stand upright, holding pack of cards.

Movement: Drop the pack on the floor and, without bending the knees, slowly pick up a card, straighten, stretch, bend and pick up another. Gradually work up to the whole deck. It's a strong bid for streamlines, if each bend is preceded by an upstretch and those girdle muscles are held snugly up and in throughout the bend.

The importance of contracting and pulling up with the middle muscles cannot be overstressed, for actually that is the streamlining action of most exercises.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Family trips to the public library can be a lot of fun.

I still have a warm feeling when I remember how often my father, mother, brothers, and sisters and I used to go to the library on Sunday afternoons. Dad, who had come from England when a young man, liked to look at the Illustrated London News. We read the science magazines or settled down in the children's room to look over the books that we were considering taking home for a week. Sometimes we talked together about what we had found, but even when we didn't there was a feeling of the family having been together.

Today, libraries offer frequently story hours clubrooms for young people, up-to-the-minute exhibits, recorded concerts, and other fascinating activities, even in fairly small towns.

C., 1948, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

FACTS ON FABRICS

WHAT do you know about fabric finishes? Textile technicians at the American Institute of Laundering have come to the fore with facts about a few of them. Some materials, they say, are given finishes which make them truly launderable. Others are allergic to the mildest washing formula.

Take one of the commoner finishes—glazed chintz. If either a wax or starched glaze is applied to this gaily-colored cotton, used for draperies, slip covers, and summer dresses, such a finish will wash out in the laundering process. The finish may be removed entirely, or will gum up and form wads on the surface of the cloth.

This wax or starched glaze is produced by use of friction or glazing calenders. The chintz is run through a hot friction roller, and the combination of heat, pressure, and friction produces a smooth, highly polished mirror-like surface.

The washable variety of glazed chintz is treated in a somewhat different manner. Chemicals, such as synthetic resins or plastics, are baked into the chintz at high temperatures. Such fabrics usually carry a label attesting to their launderability.

No difficulty need be encountered in the laundering of napped fabrics if proper care is exercised. One of the best examples of a napped fabric is a blanket which receives a finishing process that pulls the fibers of the cloth to the surface by means of revolving cylinders covered with metal points. Careful laundering in a reputable commercial laundry will produce a blanket that still has a soft, lofty nap. Improper laundering, on the other hand, will mat the nap down into the blanket and entirely destroy the downy appearance which the napping finish imparts.

Whether a water repellent finish is launderable is dependent on whether a permanent or renewable water proofingcoating is applied to the fabric. Renewable waterproofing, as the name suggests, must be applied after each laundering.

Dad Merits Stellar Role With Baby

By Norma Lanum

DAD—heretofore a forgotten person when there's a new baby in the family—has been given a stellar role in "Your Baby," by Gladys Denny Sultz and Dr. Lee Forrest Hill.

In this newly-published book, the father gets informative advice on all phases of parenthood—right from the time he suspects he might soon be a parent until he and mom send sonny off for his first day in school.

Most of the illustrating photographs, expertly done by Joseph di Pietro, show dad dressing, giving a bath and changing diapers for the new born infant while mom recuperates.

And before the baby comes, the man of the family is advised to do his share by dieting right along with his wife. This will make her calorie counting much easier, the authors tell him.

Another new angle to this baby book is the chapter devoted to "Treats for the Runabout Stage and Later." It's a collection of menus and recipes especially designed for young appetites.

The remainder of the book follows fairly orthodox patterns, mapping out the child's normal growth and development by the month for the first year and then by the year. And appending the book is the ever-important record section that becomes a treasure as years pass.

Have You Tried

Add sliced stuffed olives to creamed chicken or turkey and serve between hot buttered biscuits. To make the biscuits the easy way, add a little more liquid than usual to the dough and drop onto a buttered cooky sheet.

Season scrambled eggs with a little Worcestershire sauce, as well as salt and freshly ground pepper; then serve with creamed dried beef and mushrooms for Sunday Brunch. To make this a company meal start with a fresh fruit cocktail, add popovers, lots of good strong coffee and homemade peach or plum preserves.

Regal Shoes Now Offered to Women At 14th St. Store

When the Regal shoe shop for men moved into its new quarters at the corner of 14th and F sts. yesterday, it didn't leave a vacuum behind it. The little shop it formerly occupied halfway up the block on 14th between F and F sts. nw. is now piled high with ladies' shoes.

Although Regal has been catering to the feminine foot for many years, this is the first time the ladies' line has been shown in Washington. The Regal shop is the only one currently devoted exclusively to women's shoes; shops elsewhere sell to both men and women.

With consideration for the working girl's budget, Regal is carrying shoes selling at $3.95 and $5.95. The lower price models are flat-heeled casuals, available in 60 styles.

THIS classic opera pump is part of the line of Regal shoes now being shown in Washington. In black or brown suede, the pump has a 17/8ths heel for comfort. Another model for dressy occasions has an open lattice design on the vamp

Gleanings

Butter custard cups before filling and they will be easier to wash.

Dry your dish cloth in the open air and keep it sweet and free from odor.

Nail pieces of rubber on the bottom ends of the stepladder to prevent its slipping and causing you a nasty fall.

A Marker

Before starting to read the borrowed book, put a book marker of some sort in the front of it. Then when you are reading you will not be tempted to turn down the corner of a page to mark your place, a habit which should never be indulged in even though the book is your own.

Stop Teasing

If the child has acquired a nickname that he dislikes heartily, don't think it amusing to continually call him by that name. Rather try to persuade the family to forget it and call him by the name he desires. Don't develop an inferiority complex or a bad disposition when it is uncalled for.

Secretary Blocks Path To 'Busy' Executive

I called up a friend of mine yesterday. But first I had to talk to his officious secretary. Except for the ficticious name, this is an accurate report of the conversation:

She: Mr. Smith's office.

Me: Is he there?

She (dodging the issue): Who's calling please?

Me: Bill Gold. But you didn't tell me if he's in.

She (still dodging): What did you wish to speak to Mr. Smith about?

Me (sternly): I wish to speak to him about my client, who is going to sue him for $100,000 for breach of promise.

She: Gulp! One moment please.

Smith: Hello, Bill.

Me: Busy?

Smith: Nope. Just trying to work your blasted Washington Post crossword puzzle.

SUGGESTION

C. E. Blomquist of 4023 Beecher st. nw., thinks that an interesting post-election question for pollsters to ask would be: "What do you think of public opinion polls?"

STREET SCENE

Lee Baker of 402 4th st. ne., tells me that he saw a man emerge from a house on Chesapeake st. nw., the other day, and give himself a final before-going-to-work inspection, as a man will.

There was the usual business of brushing some dust off the sleeve of his coat, adjusting the angle of his hat and the knot in his necktie.

Then the fellow noticed a button which had been pinned in the lapel of his coat and, with apparent annoyance, removed the button, and threw it away.

Curious, Lee had to investigate. Printed on the little metal disk he picked up were the words: "Dewey—Warren."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Nine-month-old male cat, housebroken, is being evicted to make room for an income tax exemption." (Trinidad 8283 after 7 p. m).

TRANSIT REPLY

We ran a letter from Mrs. Charles Johnson of 950 25th st. nw. the other day. It contained several suggestions for Capital Transit.

A company spokesman called as soon as the paper was on the street.

"We'll spend some money to improve service," he protested, "but first you've got to show us a practical way to do it.

"We've tried to work out a way to make the number of a car visible to people on a loading platform who are one, two or three cars removed—but so far every method suggested has too many drawbacks.

"If the arm bearing such a number protrudes beyond the body of the car, it gets knocked off in close clearances. If it folds back when the car is in motion and then comes out when the door is opened, there is a danger of conking somebody on the head with it.

"So you show us how—and we'll be glad to furnish this additional service to our customers.

"And as for people taking up needed seats with infants who ride free, and should be carried on mama's lap—well, they're in a class with bundle squatters.

"If the operator were to bear down on every violation, there would be endless windy discussions and delays.

"It seems to me this is a question of common courtesy and good manners. When some folks have to stand, those who are seated should use the seating facilities as efficiently as possible—not because it's a rule that somebody is trying to enforce, but rather because they're good neighbors."

'BYE NOW

Today's broadcast will be the last in my WINX series. To those who occasionally tuned it in—thanks for having listened. If and when I return to the air, I hope we'll have a chance to get acquainted all over again.

ADD SIGNS

NO NO NO!

No birdie singing in a tree.
No sun, no shade,
No sheltered glade
No flowered nook where love is made.
No gal in shorts,
No boys in "sports,"
No fun,
No more
No-vember!

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—The movie selected for the royal film command performance in London November 29 will be "Scott of the Antarctic." Special invitations have been sent to the ambassadors from Chile and the Argentine—who claimed the Antarctic last year . . . Harry Kurnitz, the producer, submitted three film projects to Warner Bros.: "Iris March, Girl Steeplejack"; "Looking Up, the Story of Dun & Bradstreet"; and "Kansas," a picture to be filmed in Italy . . . The bearded English writer, Gerald Kersh, carries an old and a new passport for identification. One shows him with a beard, the other without—just in case he should decide to shave.

The procedure of "Where's Charlie?" are taking no risks on the possibility of Ray Bolger's becoming ill. They've insured each one of Bolger's performances—a coverage of more than a million dollars a year . . . The biggest show in television will be sponsored by Elgin Compacts on Thanksgiving Day—a two-hour variety show. George Jessel is flying East to be its master of ceremonies.

Joe E. Lewis, who returned to New York last week to work at the Copacabana, saw Jockey Sammy Renick and his bride at Toots Shor's. "Congradulate me," said Renick. "Since you saw me last, I've been married." Lewis congradulated him, and said: "Now congradulate me, because since you saw me last, I've been divorced."

Larry Weingarten, the MGM producer now visiting in New York, started as an independent film producer. He quit after his first film short, "The Garden of Eden," because the censors in Philadelphia didn't permit any serpents to be shown on the screen.

Tyrone Power recently visited South Africa, where an admirer offered him an unusual gift—a stuffed, life-size elephant. Power thanked him, and said he'd have no room for it in his home in Beverly Hills . . . "But you can keep it on your front lawn," the admirer suggested . . . "I couldn't keep an elephant on my front lawn," replied Power. "It would ruin my neighbors' drinking."

French Load 'Thank You Train'

By Drew Pearson

Just one year ago this week the Friendship Train traveled across the American continent gathering food for the then hungry people of Europe. Today, a similar train is traveling through France gathering gifts for the American people.

Pearson

The French train is called the "Thank You Train," and consists of 49 boxcars ("40 men, 8 horses") —the kind American troops rode in during World War I.

These boxcars are being filled with gifts for the American people and one car will be left in each of the 48 States. The forty-ninth car will go to the District of Columbia for transmission to the Territory of Hawaii, which contributed an average of eight cents from each man, woman and child in Honolulu to the original Friendship Train.

The French Thank You Train is coming not from the government of France but from the French people. It is being organized by Commandant Guy de la Vasselais, who served as liaison officer on General Patton's staff and is an old friend of Americans. Several million French war veterans are contributing to make the Thank You Train a success.

The gifts in the 49 cars will not include food, luxuries or wine. Instead they will be chosen from products which are typically French and will include several monuments, portraits, wood carvings, china, pottery, bells and native costumes.

Apologies to Pat Hurley

On October 25, this column published an account of how former Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley received a decoration for "gallantry in action" on the morning of November 11, 1918, the day World War I ended.

Further information has now come to hand regarding this decoration, and we now wish to apologize to Mr. Hurley.

The information comes from Col. Wilbur Rogers, formerly of the Seventy-seventh Field Artillery, Third Division. Colonel Rogers is the officer who stopped Hurley en route to the front lines and told him the war was practically over and that he was not needed at the front. Hurley was a member of the Judge Advocate General's office—in other words, an Army lawyer whose duty was behind the lines.

Colonel Rogers now points out that Hurley knew that the "cease fire" order had been called and circulated before he ever went up to the front in order to get his decoration for "gallantry in action." Therefore, concludes Colonel Rogers, Hurley actually got the medal for action after he knew the war was over.

Colonel Rogers also reports that Hurley later applied for membership in the Third Division Association in Washington, because his medal came from the Third Division. However, Third Division headquarters refused to accept the former Secretary of War for membership.

Our apologies to Mr. Hurley therefore for underestimating his gall in accepting a medal for "gallantry" after the war had virtually ended.

J. Parnell Thomas

A few readers have chided this column for its original expose last August of how Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of the Un-American Activities Committee received salary kickbacks from employes—an expose which has now led to Thomas' indictment.

Some readers apparently confuse salary kickbacks with nepotism. Both are to be deplored, but the latter is not illegal.

But it is against the law to hire a clerk or stenographer and then require him to kick back part or all of his salary to the Congressman. Clerks and stenographers are paid not by the Congressman but by the Government. Therefore, kickbacks merely mean that the Government—without its knowledge—is increasing the Congressman's salary.

A Congressman's salary is fixed by law. In fact, he himself votes to fix that salary, and recently Congressman Thomas and others voted to give themselves a wage increase of $2500 a year, plus $2500 a year for expenses, making a total of $15,000.

The result of Congressman Thomas' kickback deals meant that he was paid considerably more than his legal salary. Thomas has a long record of kickbacks going back to 1940, plus two known instances when he kept soldiers out of combat and later collected $850 from their families.

The Merry-Go-Round makes no apologies for its expose of Congressman Thomas' activities.

There was a good reason why the Voice of America so consistently informed Europe that Dewey was going to be elected. Charles Thayer, New York manager of the "Voice," was in constant touch with Allen Dulles, brother of John Foster Dulles, and one of Dewey's right-hand men . . . Diplomats are wondering what will now happen to Thayer and the many other Deweyites inside the State Department. Probably nothing . . . When Gov. Kim Sigler of Michigan, the man who did not refer the Senator Hooper murder case to Police Commissioner Toy of Detroit, was defeated, he jumped into his plane and vanished. Sigler ran 160,000 behind his own Republican ticket . . . Mrs. Truman thinks that Tade Styka, Polish-American portrait painter, is the only artist who has been able to reproduce the elusive blue-gray color of her husband's eyes . . . The teachers voted almost 100 per cent against Dewey. They did not forget Dewey's diatribe against the teachers' lobby at the Governors' Conference in Portsmouth, N. H., last summer.
